Believed To Be Author of Riverside Drive Mystery.

MURDER WITNESSED BY RECORDER GOFF

Is on His Way Home From Usual Evening Walk.

SEES MAN CARRYING WOMAN UP STONE STEPS

She Seems Intoxicated, But He Now Knows She Was in Death Struggle Identifies Body at Morgue--Autopsy Shows Her Neck Is Broken in Two Places by Twisting Her Head About on Her Shoulders

New York Dec 29—Following the discovery that the young woman in the great Christmas mystery of Riverside drive had been murdered by a man who with great strength had twisted her head about on her shoulders until the neck bones snapped in two places a high legal authority said to be none other than Recorder Goff came forward with the positive statement that he could identify the murderer that he had seen the man and woman a short time after her neck had been broken when the man was carrying her numb body to the bench where it was found seven or eight hours later

After a long conference with Recorder Goff who lives at Riverside drive and One Hundred and Fourth street Coroner Scholer announced

One of the highest legal authorities in the city has been with me to the morgue and has identified the body of the murdered girl as that of the woman he saw late Sunday night with a man The man was carrying the woman up the stone steps from the narrow park into the drive at One Hundred and Sixteenth street My informant thought that the woman was drunk and that the man was trying to sober her in the brisk night air

My informant was on his way home it being his custom to take a brisk walk before retiring and he followed the pair down the drive to One Hundred and Twelfth street where they stopped and he went on his way home paying no more attention to them other than to take such a good look at them that today he was able to identify the man

He now believes that he saw the woman soon after her neck was broken and believes that what he mistook for intoxication was paralysis resulting from the broken neck

When it became definitely known this afternoon that the young woman was the victim of a foul murder Police Commissioner McAdoo took a personal interest in the case

He first ordered Inspector McClusky to detail detectives from the Central office to the case

Coroner's Physician Weston held an autopsy on the body showing that the girl's neck was broken in two places by the powerful strangler who twisted her head about on her shoulders as if it were a weather cock

After the death injuries had been inflicted she was carried or dragged to the bench on Riverside drive near One Hundred and Twelfth street

That she was murdered in a peculiar manner is the conclusion of Dr Weston The fracture of the neck bone is not a straight break such as would have been sustained had she received a severe blow a quick jerk or a hard fall but it is a twisted fracture such as might have been produced had the murderer or murderers clutched her *in the hands and twisted it in a circu*lar manner while her body and shoulders were held fixed

The autopsy further showed a severe abrasion on the right elbow as if the woman had fallen or been thrown down and had first struck on her elbow

The Inspector Elmer O Smith who has taken his first personal interest in the case today before the autopsy was held put a score of detectives to work on the case

There has been but one possible clew in the mystery so far and the police do not hold that as positive The victim answers the general description of a young woman who with another young woman and two men were seen Christmas night in the Riverview cafe a few blocks from the neighborhood in which the dying girl was found

STILL RESTING ON OUTER BAR

The Seemingly Doomed Bristol Steamer, Drumelzin.

CAPTAIN AND CREW SEEN ON ICY DECKS

Tug Gets Heavy Hawser to the Sea-Drenched Vessel.

THE RESCUE OF THE MEN IS NOW A POSSIBILITY

Much Depends on Captain's Obstinacy Which Prevented His Abandoning Ship Monday Morning Surf Continues Too High To Launch Life Boat Great South Bay Filled With Floating Ice

Patchogue L I Dec 29—At 9 o'clock this morning the British steamer Drumelzier was resting more quietly on the outer bar three quarters of a mile off Fire Island Point

The captain and crew are still on board and can be seen scurrying about the ice clad decks over which seas are washing A tug has succeeded in getting a heavy hawser to the Drumelzier and can remove the captain and crew should the captain's obstinacy which prevented him abandoning the vessel on Monday morning moderate sufficiently to cause him to leave the vessel

The surf continues too high to permit the launching of the life boats and no attempt to communicate with the Drumelzier in this way may be made today It is impossible to learn the extent of the damage to the vessel but it is believed she is in a bad condition and no attempt to float her can be made before the sea subsides sufficiently to permit the lightering of the cargo

The crew on board last night suffered extreme hardships because of the water filled cabin and the intense cold Great South bay which must be crossed to reach Fire Island is filled with floating ice and the greatest difficulty is encountered in securing news from the scene of the wreck which is accessible only by telephone relays over the thirty mile stretch of the beach to the main land

Last night $100 could not induce bay men to cross the treacherous ten miles extent of the bay to visit the beach and reporters are strung along the south side of the island in a desperate and futile attempt to reach Fire Island

The tug Moran with two surf boats and the life saving crew of the Sandy Hook station said to be the best on the coast reached the scene of the wreck about noon The Sandy Hook surfmen speedily got into one of their boats and safely made the journey to the stranded steamer which they boarded Whether Captain Nicholson will abandon his ship and seek safety now that he has the chance remains to be seen The Drumelzier is floating the British ensign at half mast today in a sign that some of the brave crew have been lost

At 1 o'clock the Oak Island and Fire Island life saving crews started for the wreck in answer to a signal calling for boats to take the crew ashore

The wind and sea had died down considerably at this time and it looked as if the rescue could be safely accomplished

STATEMENT OF BISHOP TUTTLE

THE PRESIDING PRELATE APPREHENDS NO TROUBLE

Regarding Differences in Form of Procedure in Cases Like That of Bishop Talbot New Set of Canons Effective January 1

St Louis Mo Dec 29—Bishop D S Tuttle of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of St Louis and presiding prelate of the house of bishops of the the church does not apprehend any serious trouble in regard to the differences that may exist in the old and recently enacted canons of the church which regulate the form of procedure in cases like that of Bishop Ethelbert Talbot of Pennsylvania

The editor of The Churchman the leading organ of the Episcopalians in America has raised the point that the board of inquiry which Bishop Tuttle has appointed to hear the Talbot charges was named under canons which will be superseded by new ones before the court convenes and that it will not therefore be legally constituted

Bishop Tuttle said today The new set of canons go into effect on January 1 ten days before the board of inquiry convenes They were enacted in the general convention held in Boston last October

How they will affect the inquiry I do not know My opinion is however that the board having been called under the old canons its procedure will be regulated by them too

It is a matter for the ecclesiastical lawyers to determine and not for me I have not so much as received a copy of the new canons which are still in the hands of the printers I cannot recall the exact changes made in the old canon relating to these proceedings They are of a technical nature and relate to the form of procedure only certainly not changing it essentially

I have no doubt that the board will convene at the designated time and the board itself may agree upon a basis of procedure Whether it will decide to go on under the old canon or the new is a matter which must be decided by it

WARE'S DIFFICULT POST

Experiences of the Commissioner of Pensions.

LACK OF PRIVACY AT HIS DESK

Why He Was Compelled to Flee From His Office to a Railway Train — Trouble In Bringing His Force Under Discipline — The Wiggins Incident and Its Effect

The retiring commissioner of pensions Eugene F Ware is coming in for a good deal of comment these days some mirthful and some sardonic as was perhaps to be expected in the case of a man of his strongly individual mood says the New York Post's Washington correspondent

The new commissioner had not been in office a month before he discovered that the task set him was more than poor human nature at least his poor human nature could compass Although Mr Ware has made no secret of his intention to quit public work as early as he can be spared this winter he has not gone yet and will not go till everything is ready for the installation of his successor

One of the things which Mr Ware has found it hardest to endure is the utter absence of privacy at such a desk as his Responsible for the handling of $150 000 000 a year, he has hardly been given since he entered upon his duties thirty months ago an hour for uninterrupted labor in his room The office seekers the attorneys the hard luck story tellers the applicants for somebody's promotion have squatted upon him whenever he has been most anxious to study a case in quiet. He had not been in his place a year before having struggled in vain for weeks to read thoroughly the papers in connection with a most important piece of business he gave up in despair and rolling the documents up in a bundle walked out of the pension building without saying a word to any one He sought a railway station and inquired at what time the next train started

'For where?' asked the ticket agent

"Oh anywhere—I don't care anywhere a good way off!'

'There is a train just about to start for Charleston, S C If that will do'

'That suits me Give me a ticket'

In a few minutes he was speeding on his way southward, with no very definite idea of his actual destination In the early hours of the morning the cars were thrown off the track by a broken down freight train ahead A number of his fellow passengers were hurt and he busied himself earnestly in putting them to rights as well as might be Then he hunted up a hotel and took a room where he continued the task of delving into the papers on which he had begun on the train The next day he pushed on to Charleston took a little exercise viewing the historic places in and about the city and then plunged into work again at a hotel At night he started for Washington and on arriving returned to his desk as if he had never been away although the whole office had been in a blue funk over his temporary disappearance *But he had his case mas*tered and settled to his satisfaction

Mr Ware has been much annoyed at the personal conduct and habits of the clerks under him He found himself obliged to adopt a cast iron rule on the subject of intemperance declaring that wherever a case of immoderate drinking was proved against an employee it should be treated as ground for dismissal and that a man dismissed for that cause should never come back no matter whose influence he might be able to muster in his behalf

Next he undertook to straighten out the tangles which resulted from the failure of clerks to pay their debts Duns and attorneys had made themselves a nuisance about the building where at first they would visit employees to collect money from them and then when forbidden to penetrate the working rooms would lie in wait at the doors and catch delinquents coming in or going out The commissioner prepared a rule making it a cause for dismissal for a clerk to leave his debts unpaid to the interruption of his ingress and egress and the scandal of the service How far he was ever able to put this into operation is not definitely known

A few months later he adopted a rule against gambling This was primarily directed at the waste of government time by clerks who ran out during office hours and took flyers in stocks in the bucket shops The nuisance had acquired such dimensions as to be a source of great damage to the work of the bureau Incidentally the new rule came to be applied to gambling at the race tracks near Washington whither a large number of clerks were wont to repair daily during the spring and fall meetings and bet away their salaries for months in advance to say nothing of having their minds distracted from their regular duties for all the period while this was going on Berryman the cartoonist of the Washington Post made this order the subject of a clever pictorial skit which so delighted Mr Ware that he had it framed and hung on the wall behind his desk It represented the sporting clerks of the pension office gathered at the race track each having his face covered with a mask so that the commissioner and his aides should not discover any one's identity

The commissioner's greatest sensation however, was the Wiggins incident A [illegible] of that name was promoted [illegible] not be used he had pushed himself forward for preference but [illegible] he had not The [illegible] order announcing the [illegible] was as follows

Oct 18 1902

Record of J S Wiggins [illegible] is as follows

1 Annual leave [illegible] fourteen days

2 [illegible]

3 On [illegible]

4 [illegible]

[illegible] statesman [illegible] up [illegible] commissioner [illegible] distinguished relatives

He [illegible] services [illegible]

Mr Wiggins will be promoted [illegible] from $1400 to $1600 [illegible] chiefs are requested [illegible] commissioner with [illegible] with a small [illegible]

My [illegible] Mr D[illegible] and Mr Kelly [illegible]

E F WARE Commissioner

Of course this announcement made Wiggins a target for everything disagreeable at the hands of his fellow employees and the press There was scarcely another man of Mr Ware's rank in the service who would have cared to make such a publication There is not another who would have dared to make it It was a practical declaration of war against certain bad habits into which many of the old line clerks had drifted and which had given the head of the bureau infinite annoyance But uncomfortable as it has made life for Wiggins it has already had its effect in other directions It has made the self praisers the statesman steerers and the pedigree reciters ridiculous so that no one is likely to take them seriously again till the Wiggins incident has been forgotten

Mr Ware has in him the elements of which reformers are made He will leave his office with the respect and good will of a great many persons who have laughed over his peculiarities for underneath most things that he has done however marked their departure from the common place there was a stratum of sound sense He had merely taken a quaint way of setting it forth

METAL PNEUMONIA CURE

French Doctor Claims Healing Properties For Gold and Silver

The New York Herald publishes the following from its Paris correspondent

A sensational communication was recently made to the Academie de Medecine by Dr Albert Robin who reported his discovery of the fact that certain metals such as gold and silver very finely subdivided and employed in infinitesimal doses exercise a considerable effect on the vital phenomena

Reduction of the metals to the desired state is obtained by their electrical dissolution in water The metal so treated acquires the property of developing a force similar to that of a ferment This peculiarity of the phenomenon has led Dr Robin to use the term metallic ferments in reporting his discovery

His metallic ferments when employed in cases of pneumonia in hypodermic injections of from five to ten cubic centimeters of solution containing from nine hundredths to two tenths of a milligramme of gold silver platinum etc produced [illegible] defervescence of the malady in [illegible] of ten before the seventh day

Thirteen cures were obtained in fourteen cases thus treated

There is a complete similarity between the natural favorable crisis in pneumonia and that produced by metallic ferments These ferments therefore are capable of producing or hastening this natural favorable crisis

After one or two injections the temperature falls suddenly almost always in a definite manner The employment of these metallic ferments does not constitute the complete treatment of pneumonia for complications and the [illegible] symptoms necessitates [illegible] therapeutics but great progress would appear to have been made by their use in the treatment of this frequent and serious malady

AT HOME WITH MANCHUS

Domestic Scenes Near Japanese Lines of Battle

HOUSES INVADED BECAUSE OF WAR

Caring For Refugee Chinese Women and Children—Forced Guests of Village Patriarch— Little Wong Yu's Jealousy and How It Was Cured Betrothal of a Stable Boy

Our compound (the ground around a dwelling house) is rather domestic though it conveys a hundred intimations a day of the presence of war writes the New York Post's special correspondent from the field headquarters of General Oku's army near Mukden Manchuria

Next door all the women of the village had been collected together with their offspring at the breast One night there was considerable commotion Soldiers had dispossessed them and they had to come with their babies to seek shelter of the underground bombproof in our garden As soon as complaint to Japanese officers compelled the soldiers to give back to the Chinese women their shelter They had however to come to our compound to grind their millet for here were the only two little donkeys that went through the attack on Shilipo One was wounded with a shrapnel ball but he could still walk the round of the millet grinder (though he had to be blindfolded so he wouldn't eat too much) dragging a fragile stone over a flat stone thus thrashing the millet from its husk

Here are farms indeed all Manchuria so far as one sees in a 200 mile journey up from the peninsula is one *great garden of millet and beans dot*ted with walled settlements where the cultivators huddle together with their dogs to offer common resistance against the bandits who otherwise would eat and steal all they had What these rustic Manchurians live for is no more than the half wolves of the surround*ing plains live for They have appe*tites to be daily appeased they rear young who have to be fed and who are a link with life Otherwise there are *no ambitions no possibilities in exist*ence

By order of the army we were billeted upon a native family of some standing The wife has a severe and rather patrician face the husband possesses Chinese novels the Shuo Story which reminds you of Robin Hood and three fourths of a Chinese dictionary compared with which the Century Dictionary is a vest pocket affair yet from the torn papers in his windows and the dust upon his lintels and the ragged condition of the straw mat upon the general bench which serves as a bed you would think him poor That is merely to deceive the predatory mandarin and the burglarious Hunghutse

His children are named Number One Wong Number Two Wong and so on so he can keep count I suppose of the growth of the Wong family Number One Wong is charming by any standard He is cheerful and bright and sensitive Since the other afternoon he had eaten nothing when I saw him cutting the door jamb with an old Chinese razor great tears falling from his round cheeks

What's the matter with Wong Yu today I asked an interpreter What's he cutting up the door jamb for and crying

Oh he very angry said the interpreter because his mother she petted one of the other children

I got Wong Yu some chestnuts and a peanut and a piece of unspeakable native jellied candy and gave them to him with a slap on the back

Toshi toshi toshi he said at once his beaming like a sunrise Then he gave part to his severe looking mother and to his sick father and to his unsympathizing brothers and sisters and that afternoon we heard nothing except Wong Yu's childish delightful laughter

He showed me some original drawings of Manchurian temple decorations and gave me the Manchurian names for them the ox the ass the wolf and the temple Wong Yu cannot read yet [illegible] character to learn by heart but you would be surprised to see how many characters his elder brother Wong Shi can give a name to notwithstanding he is but twelve years old and that since the [illegible] we have not seen a single school [illegible] by every one saying the same thing over in unison (which we are told is done in American [illegible] over the same words at the same time

Some of the women are wives of [illegible] who were [illegible] captured [illegible] [illegible] Shilipo [illegible] either with a worn coat of goatskin such as you see in De Neuville's paintings of the French in the war of 1870 and over that an enveloping blanket topcoat goatskin lined So feet and hands will suffer most and the habit is to give opportunity for [illegible] A Japanese does not seem to mind cold in Japan at any rate if he can spread his hands over live coals now and again

The Chinese interpreter had found me a boy [illegible] Quong Yu and felt somewhat [illegible] The other day he came to me and said Quong Yu he want to go [illegible]

Very well I answered tell him [illegible] and if he leaves [illegible] pony [illegible]

He [illegible] In spite [illegible]

After some hesitation he added

He have no [illegible] His father [illegible] Quong Yu and Quong Yu want to go see

Well I should think he would I resolved cordially [illegible] the Manchurian women I have seen in the procession of refugees

Now from what you know in the United States of Chinese you cannot picture Quong Yu He is healthy and strong and tall and broad like a true Manchu He talks under his breath like servants of other bloods if he does not like his assigned duty But he is faithful in every particular always to be trusted I told him at the start that the pony when not in use must be exercised by the hitter daily He understood only the last part of the injunction and as the interpreter turned up only now and then as suited his mandarin habits I had for days been unable to stop Quong Yu from taking the pony out for a long walk even though I had just had it on a forty mile ride

Certainly one of the best of those who serve us is George Nobody knows his Japanese name He was on Dewey's ship at the battle of Manila Bay as steward and previously had served as second cook in San Francisco So he is what is called in the east savvy Most of the other Japanese servants and interpreters went home after a taste of war and Manchurian cold weather

George inquired his employer 'are you going home too?

Not said George until you die!

This is the old storied Japanese spir*it of devotion the spirit of the forty* seven Ronin George is the only exponent we have seen

He preferred to be called George having been in a country where that is a generic term for the off colored servant Besides his own name was complicated And one day when we noticed he had in employ a new Chinese horse boy we asked George where did you get this boy? and learned that he simply followed on and attached himself as adventurous boys at home would do to a traveling circus

What are you paying him?

'Oh sometimes I give him 5 cents sir

What is his name

His name is Charlie sir" His real name turned out to be Chong Choov Pat So the question was asked

Why don't you call him by his right name

Because Mr George replied 'it's too darn hard to remember!'

MOST BEAUTIFUL OF CITIES

English Editor Pays High Praise to the American Capital

Sir George Newnes noted English editor who returned recently to London from a trip to the United States was interviewed by a representative of the London Chronicle as to his impressions of the St Louis exhibition

The chief reason returned Sir George Newnes gravely why I cannot furnish you with my impressions of the St Louis exhibition is that I did not go there I knew all exhibi*tions were alike turmoil confusion* a heterogeneous assortment of impressions which the mind cannot well disentangle and so I stayed away My principal object was to revisit some of the chief cities of the United States and of Canada

Washington is of all cities the most beautiful and impressive in the United States It is growing more beautiful more imposing Unlike any other city it is run not by the municipality but by the government Proud of their capital the Americans therefore spare no expense on it All the railways that run into the city are now to be [illegible] to [illegible] an enormous central station Does any one say it is too expensive Very well then reply the government We'll make you a grant of land And the thing is done Some day a world city will compare with Washington

Easy Money For Prima Donnas

Singing for phonographs seems to be a high paid a musical exercise as there is says the Chicago Journal A phonograph company has offered a prima donna who sings at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York this winter $14 000 for four songs—that is $3 500 apiece is the songs are sung and $[illegible] 000 a year for four years as a reward for not singing into any other machine Great and many are the rewards of the modern goddess of grand opera She could live splendidly on what she [illegible] per [illegible] phonograph

THE JAPANESE OUTFIT.

Features of Uniforms Designed For the Soldiers.

COLD PROOF WINTER OVERCOAT

Made of Thick Woolen Cloth With Large Fur Collar, It Is Devised to Insure Warmth In Most Severe Climate—Mosquito Net Helmet a Comfort In Summer—Lamb's Wool Toe Caps to Prevent Frostbites

Miss McCaul who saw much of the British soldier on service in South Africa and of the working of the medical department of the British army was recently commissioned by her majesty the queen of England to go to Japan *to inquire into the working of the Jap*anese Red Cross society She brought back with her the complete outfit of a soldier of the Japanese Imperial guard which was presented to her by General Terauchi the minister of war together with samples of the food supplied to the soldier on active service says the British Medical Journal

The entire outfit comprises both winter and summer uniforms and un*derclothing overcoats puttees and* boots gloves and hoods knapsack haversack water bottle mess tin and canteen a grass woven case to contain the ration of rice blanket portable tent mosquito net for the head housewife bandage wrapper and identification label There is even a tin box containing creosote pills which each soldier must carry and is expected to take as a prophylactic against dys*entery One notable feature of all the* clothing is that it is apparently made of the best material The material for the winter clothing appears to be all wool and in color and warmth reminds one of the brownish Jaeger clothing

In the neat blue parade uniform jacket or tunic plain flat brass buttons are used *but in the working kit but*tons are done away with as far as possible fastenings being in nearly all instances carried out by means of flat hooks and eyes The summer jacket and trousers are of khaki drill The jacket is perfectly plain and there are no buttons on any of the garments A strip of white linen is issued to wind round the neck as a collar inside the tunic The forage cap which goes with this uniform is a marvel of lightness It has a detachable linen cover to be used in summer from which hangs a linen screen to protect the neck This screen being made in three parts—a center and two sides—allows the air to pass freely For all uniforms the trousers are made like riding breeches in that they end above the ankle where they are made to fit tight to the limb being fastened by tapes instead of buttons Puttees or gaiters must of course be worn with these The ordinary greatcoat is of thick woolen cloth with bone buttons It has a hood which can be drawn over the head A comparatively small detail in the cut of this is also of the winter greatcoat shows how carefully health and comfort and therefore individual efficiency have been considered The free edges of the front instead of being cut straight slope outward below the waist making the skirt of the coat lap over more completely below It is thus prevented from gaping in walking and the legs and knees are protected from rain The front of the skirt can be buttoned back to allow free movement of the lower limbs for marching in dry weather

A mosquito net helmet or head covering in addition to its value as a preventive of malaria is a great comfort in summer when there are many flies That issued to the Japanese soldier is made of green netting stretched on two circles of cane so as to make a long drum with one end knocked out into which the head is passed The two rings of cane are kept apart by a wire spring which allows the drum to be flattened and buttoned down for carriage

The winter tunic and trousers are made plain like the khaki suit but are of good woolen cloth

The cold proof winter overcoat merits some description for it seems to be devised to insure warmth in the most severe climate Made of thick woolen cloth it has a large collar covered with fur which is of course inside when the collar is raised From the middle of the edge of this collar a cotton cap or hood can be pulled out so as to cover the head and over this can be worn the ample detachable woolen cold proof hood Hanging by cords from the neck are large gloves or mittens [illegible] one side

[illegible] cotton [illegible] sweater and pants [illegible] winter [illegible] ribbed woolen [illegible] every [illegible] The toe caps [illegible] wool material [illegible] soft surface [illegible] fine [illegible] flannel [illegible] is issued to be worn [illegible] men and takes the place [illegible] belt

The ordinary army boot [illegible] impression of comfort [illegible] In general appearance they [illegible] boot issued to the British soldier but on close inspection they are seen to be far superior The leather of the uppers is good and reasonably soft the sole is thinner than that of the English army boot and is thinned off at the waist, making the boot more flexible in marching The flat of the sole is studded with iron hobnails and the toe and heel have brass plates The boots weigh three pounds as against the four pounds of English soldiers boots For the temporary use of men with sore feet the soft native shoe with grass sole such as is used by the ricksha men and the people generally in Japan is served out

The knapsack is of leather with the hair outside its shape being maintained by a wooden frame and this seems to us to be capable of improvement The khaki colored hemp haversack is *divided lengthwise to form two com*partments and resembles somewhat the haversack carried by English officers A useful addition to the slings supporting it from the opposite shoulder is a short strap fixed in the center of the top of the sack with a hook to fix on the waist belt and thus take off some of the weight from the sling

For carrying additional small articles of clothing the soldier has a long sack about nine inches in width and six feet long open at each end and stitched across at its center so as to make two bags It is worn over one shoulder like a bandolier the ends being tucked under the waist belt at the opposite side

The water bottle canteen and mess tin are of aluminum the first two being blackened outside the mess tin fits inside the canteen like a tray The rice ration is carried in the small grass box in front of the mess tin The copper Chinese camp kettle is a very practical contrivance It has double sides The water poured into the outer jacket is heated by burning charcoal in a small stove in the center of the vessel air being admitted by the lateral apertures near the bottom through which also the ash can be extracted With this water can be boiled even in a gale and the Japanese soldiers have realized its value in campaigning and use it very generally

Of the various samples of food the rice ration ready boiled and the biscuits—consisting of wheat and rice flour with a few grains of millet seed to prevent it from becoming too hard—are specially notable Vegetables of various kinds—sliced potatoes carrots beans sliced gourd etc—are thoroughly dried thus insuring preservation and diminished weight Tea and salt are both in solid cakes or cubes and various meats and fish are in hermetically sealed tins Even fodder for the horses is prepared like the vegetables for the men by drying

TOLSTOI ON ZEMSTVO MOVE

Russian Writer Declares It Obstructs True Progress

Count Leo Tolstoi condemns the recent zemstvo agitation in Russia culminating in a demand for a constitutional government as obstructive of real progress in the czar's dominions says a Philadelphia special dispatch to the New York World

The North American cabled Count Tolstoi asking his views on the mean*ing, scope and probable result of the* zemstvo movement In his reply the Russian author philosopher says

The present political agitation among the Russian people resulting in a direct appeal to the czar by representatives of the zemstvos aims to bring about a restriction of the despotism that now prevails and the establishment of a representative government What the results of the movement will be cannot be foreseen The aspiration is not new but the expression is

The question seems to be this Will the leaders of the agitation achieve what they desire or anything approaching it or will their efforts expend themselves in stirring up public protest without result

The country and the people are too great and the gulf between the present government and the people in some respects is too vast to permit a sensible forecast at this time but I declare that whatever the outcome one sure result of the whole matter will be to delay true social amelioration

This movement which is hailed as the dawning of a new era of liberty is but a new obstacle in the path of true progress The real uplifting of a people socially and governmentally can be attained only through religious and moral regeneration of all the individuals constituting that people Political agitation whether by peaceful propaganda or appeals to existing powers of government must have a fatal effect It puts before the nation and before individuals the pernicious illusion that social improvement can be wrought by *mere change of forms that substitu*tion of a different kind of government or amendment of the existing kind can accomplish reforms which to be effective and permanent must begin with the individual

These movements so frequent in history and so natural under the false teachings which have blinded humanity invariably hinder real progress toward peace justice and love Constitutional government is no cure for the evils that afflict mankind For proof of this I point to conditions in France in England and in America

When Can Jackie Sleep?

Says Admiral Sir John Arbuthnot Fisher first sea lord of the British navy In our future sea fights with destroyers hunting us by night and submarines dogging us by day the two chief requisites will be endurance and nerves A machine has no nerves and never gets tired In the Nelsonic days they could go to sleep at nights When the destroyers arrived we settled to go to sleep by day Now the submarine has come you can sleep neither by day nor night!'

FRUIT TREES IN STREETS

Scheme to Make Chicago a "City Beautiful.

THE IDEA OF A PITTSBURG MAN

J Horace McFarland Tells Woman's Outdoor Art League That Apples Peaches, Plums and Cherries Should Be Grown on Grass Plats Along Thoroughfares—Desires Foliage For Downtown

If J Horace McFarland's plan for transforming Chicago into a city beautiful is carried out the boys who steal apples from peddlers wagons probably will rise up and call him blessed says the Chicago Tribune So also will the policemen who keep trained down by chasing the small boys down alleys So too will the judge who sentences the youths to the parental school and also Superintend*ent MacQueery who is not allowed to administer severe punishment to the* prisoners

Mr McFarland who is president of the American Civic association said the other day at the annual meeting of the Woman's Outdoor Art league that the grass plats along Chicago's streets should be planted with fruit trees Even in the downtown district he said it would not be amiss to plant trees destined in time to bear luscious fruit' He would transform Chicago into a great orchard The applause amounted to indorsement of the plan and after the meeting several of the leaders in the league promised to start the movement at once

'I would plant apple peach plum and cherry trees along the streets of your city" he said 'I would plant strong hardy fruit bearing trees because none is more beautiful than a fruit tree You will say the small boys would pluck and eat the fruit What if they do? It will not harm the trees and it will do the boys good Only selfishness could stand in the way of such a plan The boys would learn to cherish and protect the trees it would do the outdoor art movement more good than harm to have the boys interested in the trees '

Mr McFarland who is a resident of Pittsburg, spoke on 'Common Trees and Their Uncommon Flowers' He said some of the trees which are re*garded with disfavor in America* because they are so common are treasured in Europe He held that the maple and the Carolina poplar should not be planted in the city as they soon die but recommended for city use the oak the tulip tree the linden and fruit trees generally

"Tree planting is a splendid idea declared Mrs Charles F Millspaugh president of the league after the meeting 'I cannot imagine anything more beautiful than Chicago's streets lined with fruit trees hanging with apples and peaches and plums"

Fruit tree planting, it is said will be tried first in the school yards It may help to solve the lunch room question

It would ruin our business ' said the proprietor of a fruit stand in Wabash avenue 'All the Greeks in Chicago would rise up If they couldn't be stopped any other way an ax brigade might be formed"

CRACK CORN SHUCKER

Woman Cooked Dinner and Husked Ninety-one Bushels In a Day

Of all the great corn huskers in Iowa this fall Miss Hurstad of Lakeport township Sioux county claims the distinction of beating all of the men says a special dispatch from Eldora Ia Miss Hurstad has been working as a regular corn shucker all the fall on the farm of Abram Molstad and one Saturday recently she husked ninety one bushels of corn as an ordinary day's work

Without trying to make a record Miss Hurstad brought in fifty bushels of golden ears in the morning After emptying the wagon she cared for her team went into the house and got dinner for a lot of hungry men went back to the field after her dinner work was all done and husked and brought in nearly forty five bushels before dark Some of the great cornfields are showing up a remarkable growth

At Little Sioux Alex Miller raised 205 bushels to the acre of corn and the stalks were sixteen feet in height A boy could climb five feet on the stalk without bending it over

CHILDREN AS BIRD SAVERS

Audubon Society Leader Says They Will Work if Organized

At the recent joint meeting of the American Ornithologists union and the American Audubon societies in Cambridge Mass William Dutcher chairman of the national committee of Audubon societies recommended that societies be formed among school children all over the country for preservation of birds basing his argument on the lack of reverence of most children for abstract law but their great enthusiasm under a sense of responsibility says the New York World

He also recommended the incorporation of these with the other American Audubon societies into one great organization which could avail itself of a promise by a wealthy New Yorker whose name is not mentioned to bequeath $100 000 in case the society is incorporated and to pay $3 000 a year for two years for the services of a solicitor to secure an endowment fund

New Year's Day In Quaint Japan

By AUGUSTUS W. GORGAS

Copyright 1904 by C N Lurie

CELEBRATED under more favorable meteorological auspices than in snowy America New Year's day is even more of a holiday in Japan than it is here. In the flowery empire where anniversaries and [illegible] are as many as saints' days in the Roman Catholic calendar, the dawn of the new year is the crowning festival. It takes all December to get ready for it and half of January to properly observe its ceremonies. The observation plunges the people into a general housecleaning. Merchants settle their accounts and restock their stores [illegible] liquidate their obligations. [illegible] wives renovate their [illegible] and wardrobes from [illegible] and if they have any old garments left utilize them in [illegible]. Every doorway is decorated with evergreens and every man, woman and child appears on New Year's day in the streets in holiday costume. New Year's day too with the [illegible] takes the place of our Christmas [illegible] must be provided [illegible].

Formerly following the Chinese reckoning of the seasons Japan celebrated the new year toward the end of February with the spring revival and awakening of nature but with the westernization of the empire the Chinese calendar has joined the daimios and the samurai in the limbo of the past. Since 1873 the Japanese New Year's day has been one with ours the 1st of January.

The Japanese old and young rise at dawn on New Year's day to welcome the rising sun and thus to gain the good will of that orb and of fortune for the ensuing year. Almost everything in their celebrations is symbolic even to the decorations at the house door. To the right of the entrance stands a red stemmed pine signifying woman, to the left a black pine meaning man. Together they symbolize a happy marriage. As the pine tree keeps its leaves when other trees are bare so the true heart preserves its courage in adversity. The slender bamboos, placed by the pine trees signify with their many knots, many years of happiness. The trees are joined together at the tops with festoons of straw rope and multicolored paper to ward away evil spirits and are interlaced with many branched ferns signifying a numerous progeny. Great bunches of red berries golden oranges bits of charcoal lobsters and other things figure in the decorations each having its peculiar meaning to the initiated.

Inside the garlanded doorway is a second New Year's display the offering to the household gods whose seats are surrounded with flowers and greens. To these gods are paid the first honors of the new year after the salutation to the sun.

Then the round of pleasure begins. 'Omedito' or Happy New Year, is the first word to be spoken and every one tries to be the first to say it. The day is spent largely in the streets which are clothed in gala dress of green ornamentations and national flags. The shops are decked out in their new wares and everything is bright and clean. Business ceases and there is a childlike abandon to mirth. Old men and boys fly kites all day long, gorgeous kites of wonderful forms which through devices fastened to the strings sing like aeolian harps. Many of the kites are of enormous size so large that it takes several men to raise them.

RECEIVING GUESTS ON NEW YEARS DAY IN JAPAN

Fighting kites by means of bits of glass fastened to the string which can be made to cut the kite string of a rival is a favorite pastime.

The girls and women play battledore and shuttlecock. The players have their faces powdered white and for every stroke missed a streak of black ink is drawn across the countenance of the offender. Ball playing is also popular with the Japanese ladies who bound the rubber sphere up and down on the ground to the number of a thousand times or more without stopping.

Bands of acrobats make house to house tours of the streets performing all manner of stunts in the yards while the admiring family and the servants watch from the porches.

A family gathering in the evening to play games tell stories and feast closes the day. For this feast the sake the Japanese wine is flavored with spice the rice is cooked with red beans and the distinctively New Year's dish zoni stew is served. Then the Japs go to bed hoping to dream of Fuji the sacred mountain or some other symbol of happiness.

But the New Year's celebration is not yet over. Three days at least belong to the festival and four more to the less pronounced observances. During this time calls are paid and presents are exchanged. Some of the more ambitious tradesmen open their shops on Jan 2 and encourage patronage with the promise of a gift to the first comer which results in a merry scramble but other stores remain closed for two weeks until the close of the apprentices' holiday Jan 16. On that day every working boy may spend the day as he will whatever his terms of service. Even the little devils are supposed to have a day off from their labors in the infernal regions.

One of the most beautiful features of the old time New Year's celebration in the land of the mikado and one which is now unfortunately practically extinct was the surimono or New Year's card. More than 150 years ago the custom of exchanging surimonos originated in Japan and it flourished until the middle of the last generation. The present generation knows little or nothing of the custom beyond what their forbears have told them and the masterpieces of the artists who produced the surimonos are treasured in museums the objects of reverential study to art students of all kinds. Modern Japan has substituted calendars printed in colors on Japanese cloth and which translated into our figures of time have long been in vogue in America.

EXCHANGING SURIMONOS

The surimono was originally from six to eight inches in size and was inscribed with a poetic sentiment. The cards were printed from five or six blocks each color requiring as in modern color printing a separate block. The exquisites of ancient Japan were accustomed to order the blocks for their surimono destroyed after a certain number of cards had been printed for their individual use and, rare in their own day, these exclusive picture cards are now almost priceless.

Wiping Off the Slate

The celebration of New Year's antedates history. In fact few civilized nations or even uncivilized nations have been found that had not some ceremony of the sort. Among the varying races and ages it has been observed at almost all times in the year and in well nigh all kinds of ways. One central idea however has run through it, that of turning over a new leaf or wiping off the slate. In some cases this takes the form of paying off old debts, in others of making a fresh set of resolutions, in all of cutting loose from the past and taking a stronger grip on the future. It is probable that the city in the ashes on the third level under Babylon knew a festival commemorative of the birth of the new year when young men resolved to get rid of their vices quit their meannesses and become perfectly model and upright members of the community. And also it is also probable that some of these worthy resolves were broken before the week was out for human nature has been prone to strive and fall since the days before Atlantis sunk in the sea.

This idea is especially prominent in the Chinese New Year festival which by the way is the chief celebration of the year lasting for three full days. The celebration which is held in February has been observed from time immemorial.

Those New Year's Resolutions

Mrs. Parkinson—Why, Henry, are you smoking? And just last night you resolved to stop using tobacco during 1904.

Mr. Parkinson—I'm not using tobacco, Julia. This is one of those cigars that you gave me for Christmas.

Making Up For Lost Time

Black—Just look at the smoke pouring out of the windows of Mr. Brown's house. Quick, call the fire engine.

Slack—Don't get excited. Brown swore off smoking on New Year's and he's making up for lost time.

New Year's a Persian Easter

New Year's day in Persia is celebrated much as our Easter is. Fancy eggs are sent as presents.

The Two Strange Girls

A New Year's Story
By Bradley Richmond

Copyright 1904 by American Press Association

THE old year was going out. They were expecting the crisis which the doctor had told them would occur at midnight. All were moving silently through the house treading lightly, closing doors softly, passing in and out with awe inspired by the fact that a soul was on the threshold of eternity.

Homer the sick boy thought he was standing on the bank of a river. The place was strange and he could not tell how he came to be there. With him were two girls, the one a little older than he, perhaps twelve, the other slightly his junior. He had never seen either of them before and wondered who they were. They called each other Delia and Celia, the older being Delia, the younger Celia, though they seemed not to be good friends and spoke very little together. Delia wore a jaunty dress of crimson trimmed with black velvet. On her head was a conical shaped hat with a black feather on the other side. Her hair was cut square about her neck curling at the ends behind her ears. She was of dark complexion and in her eye was a sinister look.

HE WAS DRAWN INTO THE BOAT

The younger girl was very different. She was fair. She wore a blue dress of the pale shade of the heavens on a serene day. Her hat was of so light a texture that it seemed rather like a faint luminous circlet. The children were looking at a skiff tied to a stake on the shore. In it were a pair of oars and a basket containing fishing tackle. The boat rocked lightly as wavelets rolled under it.

"Come," said Delia, "let us have a row on the river."

"No, no," said the boy, "we mustn't take the boat. What would the owner do if he were to come for it and find it gone?"

"Well, let us get in anyway," cried the older girl.

She sprang into the boat like a cat. Homer could scarcely hear her feet touch the seat. Then she stepped lightly from one seat to another to the stern.

"Come, Homer," she said, smiling at him.

"Don't go, Homer," said Celia. "The boat doesn't belong to us."

"There can be no harm in getting into it," he replied, wavering between the two.

"Come," interposed Delia before the other could speak again. And she held out her hand to him. He grasped it and was drawn into the boat. When his fingers touched hers he did not need to step; he seemed to float to a seat in the center of the boat where he sat down. As soon as he was seated Delia pushed off. He wondered what he should do. Seeing an oar beside him he cast about for its mate. When he looked up there in the stern sat Celia. He could not understand how she came to be on board.

"We'll have a ride," said Delia. "The day is lovely, the water is quiet. We can enjoy ourselves for awhile and then go back and leave the boat where we found it."

"We shall never leave it there," said little Celia sadly. Homer looked at her and saw tears in her eyes.

Delia laughed. It was a musical laugh, but there was something mocking in it.

"How stupid!" she said to Homer. "Don't you see we're drifting among the rushes?"

Homer, who now had both oars in the rowlocks, pulled through with no great force, but with just enough to carry the boat free from the rushes and out where it was caught by the current.

The image of the hills trembled in the water. Homer bent over the side of the boat looking down into an inverted dome. How strange it was—sky below and sky above. Delia, who was bending over the bow, cried out:

"Homer, see how ugly I am!"

He looked, and there was the reflection of her face in the water distorted by the ripples.

"Celia, look over," he said, "and let us see if you are ugly."

Celia leaned over the side of the boat. The reflection of her face was undulating, but not distorted. Her light hair, wriggling like serpents, fell over her shoulders and its ripples mingled with those of the water. Her eyes were the exact shade of the reflected heaven which formed a background for her face. Homer rested his arm on her waist. He was very happy. Glancing at Delia he saw that she was looking at them with a malevolent stare. She put her fingers in the water and began to move them to and fro making ripples.

Suddenly a quick [illegible] of laughter rang out at the bow like multiplied echoes. Delia had caught sight of a cataract in the river below.

"Now, Homer," said Celia, "you must take the oars and pull. We are coming to a dangerous place where all depends upon your courage and strength, though I will help you at the tiller if I can."

The boy turned his head and looked down the stream. He could see a place where the river seemed to end suddenly, but really it divided above a cataract, a part running triangularly around an island. For a moment he felt the color leave his cheek. Then he took up the oars and began to pull. Celia turned the rudder so as to keep the boat toward tranquil water, while Delia with a paddle tried to keep the prow toward the fall. Homer's back was toward Delia so that he saw only the girl at the tiller.

With this Homer applied himself vigorously again, and in a few minutes they passed into the current that led from the cataract.

Down this stream they floated past green trees bending toward them and pleasant fields and meadows with waving grain and hills on which cattle were feeding. The sun standing above this ridge and behind a cloud and shot gilt rays fanlike toward the earth. Then it emerged blood red.

"What a beautiful football it would make," exclaimed Homer.

The children drifted on. The sun went down, the dusk came, the air grew chilly. The river began to broaden. They passed a village on the shore, then another. Then they saw the lights of a city ahead and above it the dim shapes of towers and spires, for it was too dark for them to see the houses below. They were soon abreast of the lights, some low on the brink of the water, some high in the air, all reflected. Extending across the river was an archway of brighter lights. It marked the span of a bridge. Drifting under it Homer could hear footsteps and wagons and the tramp of horses passing over, but the boat shot swiftly out and soon left the sounds and the lights behind them. Then he looked up in the heavens and saw the stars shining.

The shores now receded farther from them and grew dimmer. At intervals the boy heard Delia in the bow give a low laugh as though she at least was satisfied with their position, while through the gloom the steadfast eyes of Celia gazed at him hopefully. Homer stood up in the boat to look about him. Far to the right and to the left were the shores of the river; before him the ocean.

Then there came a transformation. While he looked the river, the shores, the ocean, that deeper ocean above from which the stars were beginning to fade, even the boat with the two girls were dissolved before his eyes, were merged into a different scene. He was lying in his own room at home and in his own bed. An old gentleman sat beside him holding his wrist with one hand, while in the other was a watch. Then Homer knew that the rippling sound of the water against the boat was nothing but the ticking of the watch.

He recognized the man beside him as the family physician. When the doctor saw the boy open his eyes he looked pleased and said:

"The crisis has passed. He will get well."

Then Homer's mother came and bent over him and kissed him, and he put his arms feebly about her neck and asked:

"Mamma, have I been ill?"

"Yes, my child, but you will get well now. This is the beginning of a new life for you. It is New Year's morning."

"Have any children been with me?"

"No one has been with you except the doctor and me."

The boy lay thinking.

"Oh, mamma," he exclaimed, looking up, "it is so hard to go back after one has taken a wrong step! And through this year I am going to try not to do wrong."

THEY PASSED INTO THE CURRENT

A... Farewell to The Old Year

WE laughed with you, we chaffed with you
The glass of fun we quaffed with you,
While sitting side by side.
You made life bright
Put out of sight
The griefs we had to hide.

WE danced with you, we pranced with you
While others less entranced with you
Just slowly plodded on.
You lent a hand
At all we planned.
We miss you now you're gone.

WE GRIEVE THAT YOU SHOULD DIE

WE dined with you, we pined with you
And man too oft wined with you,
Old year who went so fast.
You were a friend
Clear to the end.
Your joys and woes are past.

WE laughed with you, we cried with you
And some they almost died with you.
'Tis hard to say goodby!
Your heart was warm
Through sun and storm.
We grieve that you should die.

A New Year's Cake

Delicate or silver cake has always been especially popular at New Year's. Like poundcake, it depends entirely upon eggs for its lightness. No baking powder or soda and cream of tartar are as a rule used in its preparation. The old recipe for this cake called for a pound of flour dried and sifted, three-quarters of a pound of butter creamed with a pound of sugar and the whites of twelve eggs beaten very stiff. This cake is more often flavored with a little bitter almond than anything else. A cheaper rule for it includes a small quantity of cream of tartar and soda. Stir to a cream one cupful of butter and two cupfuls of granulated sugar. Sift a teaspoonful of cream of tartar and a scant half teaspoonful of soda with two cupfuls of flour several times. Add the whites of six eggs beaten to a stiff froth. The cake should be well stirred and the whites added the last moment and quickly folded in. Bake the cake slowly at first and when it is risen let it brown. The juice of a lemon is often added and prevents the cake being too dry. Ice it with a thick white icing or a dark one of chocolate and sugar.—New York Tribune.

New Year's In Russia

On New Year's morning the princes of the Russian imperial family, court functionaries and servants of the palace come in regular order to present their homage to the emperor, who kisses all the members of his family and the highest of the officials three times according to the Russian fashion. In the streets the people kiss each other whether acquainted or not. The favored ones who have been kissed by the czar are permitted to kiss the hand of the empress as well. The ceremony of hand kissing was suppressed for a time but was re-established in the empire under the reign of Alexander II. On New Year's day at breakfast, dinner and supper the guests standing about the table touch glasses, drink the health of the emperor and offer good wishes to each other.

The New Year Dawns

The New Year dawns, the sun shines strong and clear
And all the world rejoices and is gay.
The flitting birds flit from spray to spray,
Flit busily and twitter in my ear
Their little frozen notes of wintry cheer.
From ruddy children with the snow at play
Ring peals of laughter gladder than in May,
While friend greets friend with "Happy be thy year!"

So I would joy if thou wert by my side,
So would I laugh if thou couldst laugh with me—
But left alone in darkness I abide.
Mocked by a day that shines no more on thee
From this too merry world my heart I hide.
My New Year dawns not till thy face I see.

The Story of A Tenderfoot

"HAPPY New Year! Happy New Year and [illegible]," my friend chuckled.

Great Scott, [illegible]! Give me your [illegible] et [illegible]!

It was in the [illegible] [illegible] where we had stopped for breakfast. I had had [illegible] ney over the [illegible] and the prospect of a [illegible] companionship for the day [illegible]. If her affection were not [illegible] was a pleasant one.

"All aboard!" shouted the conductor, and "Oh, dear," murmured the lady below her breath [illegible] anxiously from the window in the direction of the baggage room.

But the [illegible] that he looked for [illegible] nor did her escort. The train moved out at a rapid rate and an anxious faced little woman settled into her seat and shaded her eyes with her dainty lace handkerchief. I [illegible] rectly behind her and I could swear she was crying. I pitied her, though I would have died rather than offend her. I was [illegible] about to step forward and offer my [illegible] in my power when the conductor came in.

"Ticket." But she had no ticket, and she told the conductor her story. She had handed the bit of pasteboard to her brother to get the trunk checked just as the train started. He had not returned, and she had only money enough with her to pay for her meals on the journey. She was going to Denver.

I thought the conductor's manner was positively brutal. He listened to her tearful story and instead of sympathizing with her remarked that the rules of the road required her to produce a ticket, pay her fare or get off and walk. My blood boiled.

"The lady's story is true," I exclaimed. "I witnessed the whole occurrence, and her brother took her ticket in order to get her trunk checked just as the train left Lincoln. I saw the ticket."

"Oh, thank you, sir," said the little woman earnestly, turning to me. Her eyes were of the darkest blue. I hadn't noticed them before, and they nearly burned a hole through my susceptible heart. The upshot of it was that I advanced the money for her fare to Denver. [illegible] had her drawing room [illegible] ticket and took a seat beside her as my right and privilege.

would always be so grateful to me for my kindness.

"And I will never, never forget it," she concluded, with another look of those [illegible] eyes.

I tried to throw the eloquence of a Webster or a [illegible] into the simple "Won't you" that constituted my modest reply.

[illegible]

"Happy New Year," were her last words. "[illegible] on New Year's day [illegible]."

But the ticket, I gasped.

NEW YEAR'S AT HOME

A Few Pointers on the Way of Receiving and Entertaining.

In these days the custom of receiving on New Year's is not followed to any great extent, writes Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer in the New York World. However, it is a very charming and old fashioned way for young girls to entertain their friends.

It is not necessary to send cards especially engraved for the occasion. Informal little notes will answer. Just write saying that you and your sisters will be at home New Year's day, mentioning the name of some older woman who will receive with you.

If you are anxious to make the afternoon formal you may send your own, your sisters' and your chaperon's visiting cards. On the older [illegible] card write the words "At Home, January 1." This will be all the invitation that is necessary.

In serving refreshments remember that it is very bad taste for young girls to offer men wine. Under no circumstance do this. You will be surely misunderstood if you do.

Have a small table laid with an attractive lunch cloth and [illegible] rolled bread and butter sandwiches, fancy cakes and hot coffee with whipped cream. You and your sister should take turns at presiding here and serve the refreshments to your guests as they arrive.

It is not necessary to have any formal entertainment. [illegible] music will suffice. Receive your guests by simply wishing them a happy New Year and tell them how pleased you are to see them.

If you have [illegible] a piano it will be a very acceptable accompaniment in case you wish to offer a [illegible] musical entertainment. The charm of such a reception [illegible] that [illegible] genuinely glad to see them.

New Year's Resolutions

Now is the time to [illegible] New Year's resolution. Do not [illegible] self be hindered [illegible] that your resolution [illegible] vanished [illegible] that your high ideals have been preserved for you. Nothing so destroys ideals as to attain them. To keep all your New Year['s] [illegible] would be to have an [illegible] [illegible]. Nevertheless it will do you [illegible] make the usual batch of [illegible] selves with the beginning of the new year. The entire universe is held together by its habit of falling. All progress in the world is held together by a series of falls. Walking, running, swimming, flying, all is falling, recovering and falling again. The law of gravitation is simply the law of falling. If it were not for the tendency of all things to fall this world [illegible] would fly into space in [illegible] moments. If it were not for the tendency of all men to fall we should [illegible] with self conceit. All men must fall, but no man need lie down.—New York Press.

A Pittsburg clergyman apparently a Presbyterian [illegible] Dr. Abbott [illegible] Presbyterian [illegible] ulous to put the theory of evolution before that of creation.

But the pulpits which hold [illegible] istic foundation [illegible] by no means unanimous. The [illegible] of a leading Reformed church in New York says that Dr. Abbott merely [illegible] the evolutionary [illegible] which the church is coming to accept more and more every day.

A Boston Congregationalist clergyman says that Dr. Abbott's utterances represent the [illegible] religious convictions [illegible] Americans, and contain no heresy.

A officer of the national council of the Congregational church by which Dr. Abbott was ordained says he will probably not be summoned before any [illegible] and contain no heresy.

One Chicago Baptist clergyman thinks it was very unwise to give utterance to such radical ideas in the presence of immature men, as the believers in the old creed do not represent the true body of thinking men.

But another Chicago Baptist preacher sees nothing out of the way in the ideas Dr. Abbott has advanced, as the popular idea of God is very crude and he may have [illegible] keynote [illegible] anyway. He has always been known as very [illegible] and very rational. And another Chicago pastor [illegible] church [illegible] thinks Dr. Abbott has [illegible] open to any [illegible].

[illegible] lives of three [illegible] of Protestant Christianity, the Methodist or Arminian, the Presbyterian, Congregational or Calvinistic and the Baptist, which separates itself from other [illegible] on the [illegible] and that in one locality at least it is most scriptural—without any sort of agreement among themselves when confronted with what seem to most Christian [illegible] merely poetic pantheism [illegible] as [illegible] it, or resisted it as christian, non-christian or anti-christian.

Now the laity may not be wise in theology, but they expect that when a man is put forward as a leader in any institution he will stand positively for the doctrines on which that institution [is] founded.

If a man sets out to lead the Republican party he is expected to believe in Republicanism. If he sets out to lead Democrats he is required to believe in Democracy.

So if a man sets out to be a christian preacher and leader it seems necessary that he should believe in the fundamental christian doctrines. Moreover if he does not so believe how can he expect or require followers to believe in them?

And yet, as in the case under consideration, what do we find? Doubt, difference, uncertainty, weakness, hesitation. No lines, no limits, no compass, no direction.

Is it any wonder that the flocks wander when so many shepherds confess that they have lost the way?—Chicago Inter Ocean.

[New York Press.]

Christmas is a very happy time after it is all over.

It's queer what an awful long time the shortest kind of a woman can take [illegible].

A very young girl is crazy to be old so as to have beaux, and old ones to be young for the same reason.

When a girl puts rouge on her cheeks it is a sign she trusts the man who is going to be with her not to kiss her anywhere except on the lips.

Every time a woman reads a new novel she has an aspiration to be different from what she has ever been for thirty seconds after she finishes it.

He who shies at a ghost is afraid of nothing.

WADDELL HOME TRUSTEES MEET

Object Is Establishment of an Endowment Fund.

PRACTICAL PLAN OUTLINED BY AN INSURANCE AGENT

Benjamin Waddell Announces That if Insurance Fund of $30 000 Is Raised He Has Promise of $50 000 More From Person Whose Name for Reason Is to Remain Unknown

A very important meeting of the trustees of the Waddell Ladies Home association was held Wednesday which had for its object the establishment of an endowment fund for the home

R W Rae the general agent for the Prudential Insurance company was heard by the trustees during the session as to a plan he had outlined by which an endowment fund of $30 000 might be secured

Before the meeting Mr Rae had interviewed all of the representatives of insurance companies in the city and secured their indorsement and acquiescence in the plan to be presented to the trustees He therefore appeared as a representative of all the companies

The proposition was that each company should call on its patrons and secure sums of insurance ranging from $1 000 up in favor of the home the subscriber to carry the insurance until his death when the money is to be paid to the home endowment fund

The plan thus briefly outlined was received with much enthusiasm by the trustees and being accounted good in every way the insurance agents of the city will begin at once to write insurance to the amount required

It is desirable to secure an endowment fund of $100 000 and Benjamin Waddell the builder of the home announces that if the insurance fund of $30 000 is raised he has the promise of the remaining $70 000 from a party who prefers at present to remain in the background until the sum is raised

Mrs M V Schaffer of Columbus has been tendered a position as matron of the home and will probably accept the responsibility She is widely experienced in the work

IMPRESSIVE EXAMPLE OF THE NOBLER LIFE

Meets Death in the Wreck of the Limited at Delaware Is One of the Most Respected and Popular of the Big Four Employes Is Always Seeking To Do Good

The story of the death of Charles Kishler a passenger conductor who was killed in a Big Four wreck at Delaware last June has inspired the R D Box and Label company to issue an unique folder entitled The Nobler Life and bearing on the title page a splendid likeness of the dead conductor with the inscription A lesson from the life of Charles Kishler passenger conductor killed at Delaware June 1904 His aim in life was to do good

The Cleveland Leader of Sunday gives the story of the folder two thirds of a column The folders are being distributed among railroad men all over the country and read as follows

Charles Kishler a passenger conductor on the Big Four railroad who met death in the wreck of the Limited at Delaware Ohio was one of the most popular and respected men on the line Without being in any way obtrusive he was a constant and earnest christian worker As the boys put it He was always seeking to do good

On the train he always carried a bible with him and after he had finished his work he would talk temperance and the living of an upright life to his fellow trainmen and to the passengers He would urge them to be strong against the temptations common to man and many are the men he led to a better life many are the homes he blessed by his teaching

At home he was faithful and loving an ideal husband and father living the nobler life daily hourly

His spare time was spent in visiting hospitals infirmaries the workhouse and missions and wherever he went it was to spread the true religion of faith hope and charity and live it to the letter

The closing moments of his life full of fearful physical suffering show the man's strong faith his christian patience his inspiring heroism Lying pinned beneath the debris of the wreck from which his fellow trainmen had tried in vain to extricate him crushed scalded by the escaping steam dying he managed to gasp this message for his wife in Cleveland Boys tell Maggie it's all right—I'm safe in the arms of Jesus

VERY HIGH FINANCE

SYSTEM USED BY MRS CHADWICK AND MME THERESE HUMBERT

The Kind of Finance In Which They Were Expert Counts High For Their Victims—Careers of Two Women Show Resemblance In Methods

As one remarkable fact after another is brought out in the [illegible] of Mrs Cassie L Chadwick it is seen that the story of her operations rivals in complexity that of Mme Therese Humbert the famous Frenchwoman whose case was the sensation of a year and a half ago. A brief outline of the careers of these two operators in frenzied finance shows that both based their financial cheating on representations made as to fortunes supposed to be in their possession but which never existed.

Mrs Chadwick is now under indictment upon numerous counts among them being charges that she forged two notes one for $250,000 and the other for $500,000 signing to both the name of the multimillionaire philanthropist Andrew Carnegie. Her operations involve a much larger amount than the sum of the two notes however. It is alleged that she was born in the early fifties in the province of Ontario Canada that her name was Elizabeth Bigley and that her father was a poor farmer with eight children. She had a great desire to spend money even as a girl and it is stated was tried on a charge of undertaking to secure money by forgery but acquitted on the ground of insanity. She next appears as the bride of a Dr W S Springsteen of Cleveland who married her supposing her to be an Irish heiress and a capitalist and deserted her on discovering the falsity of such pretensions.

MRS CASSIE L CHADWICK

Some years later she wrote to her relatives that she had married an elderly man C L Hoover who had died leaving her a wealthy widow with a son. It is said that she is the Mme De Vere clairvoyant who was tried for forgery and sentenced to a long term in an Ohio penitentiary but was paroled after serving part of her term. The heroine of this tale of strange adventure reappeared in Cleveland as a masseuse and in this capacity was employed by Leroy S Chadwick a wealthy invalid whom she soon married and with whom she lived for some years in apparent domestic felicity at the Chadwick home on fashionable Euclid avenue thus ingratiating herself with business men.

In this way she involved in her fortune leading bankers and other respected citizens claiming relationship to Andrew Carnegie in order to further faith in her financial credit and in borrowing fabulous sums of money on the strength of possessing securities supposed to be worth $[illegible],000,000 but which proved to be worth little more than so much old paper.

MME THERESE HUMBERT

Mme Humbert who is now in a French prison was like Mrs Chadwick unattractive personally as a young woman but so clever that she [illegible] operations on a [illegible] scale and [illegible] even high government officials in the meshes of her schemes. She was born Therese d'Aurignac. She claimed to have received a fortune from an American named Crawford who died at Nice and left her [illegible]. It turned out that no such American and no such fortune ever existed but she got up a contest in the courts with fictitious nephews of the supposed dead man who were alleged to be opposing settlement of the fictitious fortune. Therese was believed to have come into possession of this fortune as its custodian and she borrowed immense sums from banks and capitalists every one being eager to lend to a woman who could give such ample security. Belief in the mysterious fortune was kept up and it was years before the gigantic swindle was exposed.

the supreme power and destroyed that confidence of the people in their government which is so essential to a healthy national life.

The Russian zemstvos originated about forty years ago in the reign of Alexander II being an evolution from the primitive commune and municipal corporation. They are local elective bodies and such duties as the construction of public works building of roads regulation of public health and education come under their jurisdiction. The members are chosen for three years and three classes of voters participate in their election. The voting classes include landed proprietors burghers mechanics and peasants.

These assemblages have come gradually to represent the aspirations of the people to possess a voice in the government of the empire but the bureaucrats of the imperial court have constantly sought to repress the zemstvos and curtail their growing powers. The zemstvo representatives stand for freedom of conscience and of the press freedom of speech and freedom of meeting and association. They also ask for the creation of some elective body through which the people may make known their needs and participate in legislation. In the presentation of their memorial to the emperor it is held that an important victory has been gained for progressive ideas in

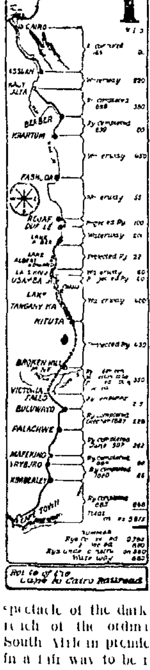
JAPANESE SOLDIER IN MARCHING ATTIRE

FROM CAPE TO CAIRO

ROUTE WHICH WAS THE DREAM OF CECIL RHODES WILL BE REALITY

Southern Portion of Route About Ready For Traffic — Victoria Falls Scenic Wonder of Africa Is on the Line—Bridge Over Zambezi River



The majority of Europeans come to America chiefly to see Niagara Falls. Perhaps the time is not far distant when many Americans will journey to Africa chiefly to see Victoria falls. Thousands of American tourists have seen the pyramids of Egypt. They are an old story in more than one sense of the word. But very few Americans have seen Victoria falls and this scenic wonder is as yet a novelty among the sights which the world affords. The realization of the late Cecil Rhodes' dream of a Cape to Cairo railroad will bring the great scenic spectacle of the dark continent within reach of the ordinary tourist. The South African premier's dream is now in a fair way to be realized at no distant day. Rhodes himself died too soon to witness the fulfillment of his plans in respect to a highway of commerce through the length of Africa but those plans have gone forward and now in a short time trains will be running over a considerable portion of the route.

The road is being built primarily for its value as a commercial highway and the use it will have in connection with the development of the natural wealth of the parts of the African continent which it will reach. But incidentally the tourist traffic is expected to produce a considerable revenue perhaps enough to pay the running expenses of the road for there will be widespread eagerness in both Europe and America to witness the scene which for the first time will be brought within reach of the average globe trotter by the opening of this route.

Over a thousand miles of the journey from the Cape to Cairo will be by water. Fast steamers will ply over the lakes and rivers connecting the different portions of the railroad and thus for the tourist the journey will be diversified and the attractiveness of the trip increased. Before the death of Cecil Rhodes the railway forming the southern portion of the route had been built from Cape Town to Bulawayo. Work was interrupted to some extent by the Boer war. Construction has since progressed until the Victoria falls have now been reached and work is being pushed on a bridge across the Zambezi river at the falls. The latter somewhat resemble the falls of Niagara but are on a grander scale. They are over a mile wide and about 400 feet high or about two and one-half times the height of the falls of Niagara. The bridge over the Zambezi in front of the falls and within reach of the spray will be a remarkable work of engineering. It is a single span bridge and crosses the river at a height of [illegible] feet above the water, the banks of the gorge being most precipitous. The bridge is being built from each end simultaneously until it meets in the middle a very difficult task but one that the modern engineer attempts without any particular misgivings.

Near the Victoria falls the line of the road has been diverted from the original to touch the mammoth coal deposit known as the Wankie coal fields. It is estimated that from this region enough coal can be taken in the next ten years to pay the entire cost of the road. About 2,78[illegible] miles of railway in the Cape to Cairo route have now been completed, [illegible] miles are still under construction and some 860 miles of the route occupy the status of projected lines. But at the rate the work is progressing it will not be long before the journey through the length of the dark continent can be made comfortably and even luxuriously by any one with the money to pay the fare.

ABLE AND BROAD MINDED

Railroad President Mellen Whom Mr Roosevelt Quoted

When President Roosevelt in his recent message to congress quoted from a speech by the president of one of our great railroad systems he referred to President Charles S Mellen of the New York New Haven and Hartford railroad. He did not give the name of the railroad president but the language he quoted in discussing the relations of capital and labor was taken from a speech delivered a year ago by President Mellen before the Hartford (Conn) board of trade. In this address Mr Mellen pointed out the responsibilities of large corporations and urged forbearance between employer and employee.

Mr Mellen was born in Lowell Mass in 1851 and went to school in Concord N H. He had an aptitude for mathematics and when he obtained a position in a railway office in Concord as a boy of sixteen he showed so much readiness for performance of duties of an important character that advancement soon came to him. He went from the service of one road to another always gaining in prestige and influence, until at thirty seven he was drawing a salary of $15,000 a year as traffic manager of the Union Pacific.

Soon afterward an election as second vice president of the New York New Haven and Hartford road came along, and his record in this position won for him the presidency of the Northern Pacific. That was in 1897. A year ago he returned to the New Haven road, to be its president.

COLONEL BILL GREENE.

Arizona Copper King Who Equals Lawson In Picturesqueness

Colonel William C Greene, whose controversy with Thomas W Lawson has contributed to the gayety of the nations is as picturesque a character in his way as Lawson himself. Colonel Greene's assault on Mr Lawson through the advertising columns of the newspapers added a new phase to the war which the latter has been carrying on against his foes in the world of high finance. When the doughty colonel who in days gone by went up against the Indians and bad men of Arizona, announced that he was going to Boston to meet Lawson and tell him that he was a "liar, fakir and charlatan," the public inferred that he meant to take his well known gun along.

It was naturally supposed that something would be doing in case they met because of Greene's western record during the period when he was known as Broncho Bill. He has several notches on his gun in proof of his handiness with that weapon and as reminders of occasions when his marksmanship was better than the other fellow's. In the course of his career he has been shot five times.

His coolness saved his life last spring when a mining speculator who had a grievance against him attacked him on the street in broad daylight in New York city. Greene laughed at his would be murderer brushed his revolver aside with a newspaper and persuaded him to defer the shooting until their differences could be discussed. Recently the same man threatened him again and was arrested. Greene won his title of colonel fighting Indians. His mining property is located at the spot where Chief Geronimo surrendered to General Miles. Tradition has it that in one of his Indian fights Greene was picked up nearly dead from loss of blood with thirteen good Indians near by as proofs of his deadly aim.

IMPEACHMENT TRIALS.

Precedents to Govern the Case of Judge Swayne.

THE MANAGEMENT AND PROCEDURE

Rules Governing Admission of Evidence—Unusual Incidents In the Impeachment of Andrew Johnson Senators Jealous of the Vote of the Chief Justice

Crowded with interesting pictures of the historic past are the precedents that govern an impeachment trial like that now apparently under way in the case of Judge Charles Swayne of the Florida federal court says the Washington correspondent of the New York Post

In drawing up the articles of impeachment the house may act with considerable freedom Although these are in the nature of an indictment they are not drawn so strictly as a legal paper Attempts have often been made to exclude from the charges anything which was not an indictable offense at law but the house of representatives has steadily refused thus to tie its own hands It will be recalled that a first attempt to impeach Andrew Johnson led by Mr Ashley of Ohio, was resisted by James F Wilson of Iowa on the ground that congress could impeach the president only for an indictable offense Wilson argued this point vigorously and on that issue apparently carried the day although it is supposed that congress actually preferred not to impeach Johnson at that time desiring merely to serve a warning upon him and in playing its part took refuge behind Wilson's argument But this was no new principle It had been urged by William Wirt in his defense of Judge Peck in the famous trial of 1830 and James Buchanan of Pennsylvania one of the managers on the part of the house resisted it vigorously and successfully The house of representatives has never except in this first Johnson attempt, given any recognition of this principle

Everybody takes it for granted that Speaker Cannon will appoint the managers on the part of the house and yet this is not the old historic practice but is rather a development of house methods which has come from the increasing size and growing subordination of its membership In the Humphreys impeachment the speaker appointed the managers, in the Belknap impeachment they were chosen by a resolution offered from the floor In the Andrew Jackson trial they were chosen by ballot It is assumed that if we were to have a great case with conflicting and excited feelings the managers on the part of the house would be chosen in this way as one of the high prerogatives of its members But the house rarely resorts to this method, and if it did so at all it would be by a resolution naming the men and these selections would be the result of some sort of caucus action That was practically what happened in the Belknap trial The minority party is given representation also although the managers seven in number must all be men in favor of impeachment Whether they must be in favor of impeachment on the grounds which the house accepts raises an interesting question in this case which practically centers about the personality of Mr Littlefield He would be a strong and useful man in such service even though it is assumed that the house will adopt a wider bill of particulars than he has approved He would have to argue before the senate that certain offenses warranted impeachment while on the floor of the house he had argued that they did not But in the attitude of an attorney representing the house he might serve and probably will do so

The second attempt to impeach Andrew Johnson came up after his removal of Stanton The house then insisted on putting in other articles besides this alleged illegal act He was charged with lowering the dignity of his office by intemperate speech which was certainly not an indictable offense Mr Wilson called attention to the fact when it came up on the floor of the house but he was overruled and was then made one of the managers

Certain things happened in the Andrew Johnson trial which are unusual The house of representatives resolved itself into a committee of the whole with Henry L Dawes as chairman and accompanied its managers to the senate with clerks and doorkeepers They were formally received by the senate and seats were provided The speaker of the house was given a place beside the president of the senate The house will not go over there this time and on the other hand the house leaders reject the view that the senate will hear the testimony through a committee on inquiry which Senator Hoar set on foot at the last session for the government of future impeachment trials John A Bingham of Ohio read the articles of impeachment in the Johnson trial

In that trial the chief justice of the supreme court necessarily presided in accordance with the provisions of the constitution The presiding officer of the senate if he is the vice president, stands next in line in the succession and so would be interested in the result At that time before the passage of the presidential succession act the president pro tempore of the senate had an equal interest in the case where there was no vice president This was the first time that a chief justice had presided and the senators were naturally very jealous of the precedents which it might raise They seemed much afraid that he would want to [illegible] and might vote in Johnson's favor This would neutralize two senators on the other side and so was a dangerous suggestion

Mr Chase was accordingly not invited to preside until after the articles had been read and throughout the trial the dominant senators used every effort to strike down the idea that the senate was sitting as a court refusing to have it spoken of as a high court of impeachment It was apparent that if they were to sit as a court with the chief justice as the presiding officer under the constitution and a member of the court he would naturally want to participate in its proceedings Senators Conkling and Morton began to cast out every term which would lead to that construction even striking the word court out of everything and declaring that they were sitting as a senate for the trial They thus restrained the power of Mr Chase in the admission of evidence as far as possible In point of fact he did vote where there was a tie on minor questions like that of the daily adjournment but not without protest Charles Sumner made some remarks on this question and put in a resolution designed to prevent the chief justice from voting on even the most insignificant point and as it turned out Mr Chase made no attempt to vote on the final issue

Another interesting feature of that trial was the challenging of the vote of Ben Wade of Ohio the president pro tem of the senate and the man who would have become president had Johnson's impeachment been consummated When Wade took the oath the point was raised that his salary would become $25 000 a year besides the emoluments of the presidency and that he could not from well known maxims of law serve as a judge in the case This was thrashed out somewhat but without a definitely adverse decision Wade refrained from voting all the way through on subsidiary questions until just before the close of the trial when he began to vote and voted on the final issue

Another vote on that case which was subject to challenge was that of Senator Patterson of Tennessee a son in law of Andrew Johnson For obvious reasons he was not formally challenged and he voted throughout the case for acquittal of course Benjamin F Butler brought out an interesting point in alluding to this relationship when he recalled that one of the judges who sat on the trial of Anne Boleyn wife of Henry VIII was her own father and that he decided against her on a most shameful charge In a striking passage General Butler voiced his expectation that the relative of the president would measure out even handed justice

President Johnson of course did not appear in person at his trial Belknap appeared as did Judge Chase and Judge Peck It is assumed that Swayne will appear in person as well as by counsel and he is likely to go upon the stand in his own defense if the senate permits him to do so although no such case has ever arisen The answer to the charges which are first formally presented is supposed to be prepared by the respondent's attorney but the Library of Congress today contains in its archives Andrew Johnson's answer written in his own crabbed handwriting Judge Swayne will probably have a large hand in drawing his own answer The house managers make a formal rejoinder or replication

There has probably been more solemnity in the impeachment trials of the past than the present day senate will permit in this case which its leaders look upon somewhat contemptuously When Judge Chase was tried the old hall was appropriately draped and the old ceremonial was adhered to Today the senate will handle this case as a matter of routine business The examinations and the cross examinations are conducted as in court and there is always much sparring over the admission of evidence In the trial of Judge Peck an attempt was made by William Wirt to obtain a more liberal construction of the law of evidence He cited the masterly protest uttered by Burke in the Warren Hastings case against the application of the rigid rules that govern ordinary practice and argued that the law and custom of parliament should prevail James Buchanan replied and in arguing for the strict construction referred to the almost forgotten fact that in the Hastings case it was decided to hold the evidence down to the recognized rules As the trial of Judge Chase had proceeded on the same principle the senate by a vote of 7 to 35 rejected Wirt's proposal

The question came up again in Andrew Johnson's trial when Charles Sumner made an effort to get a change in the rules of evidence arguing that this was an impeachment trial before the senate of the United States and not a proceeding by indictment in a federal court and that the senators were from beginning to end judges of fact as well as of law and judges from whom there was no appeal He argued that all evidence except that which was trivial or obviously irrelevant should be received without objection to be sifted by the senators themselves in their final judgment By a vote of 33 to 11 this proposal was rejected The great argument against it was that in a body composed of so many business men not acquainted with the practice of law the rules of evidence which had come down the centuries would be of the utmost guiding value hence it is certain that the rules will be strictly adhered to in the Swayne case

It is a peculiar fact that the right of unlimited debate in the senate is checked in an impeachment trial and apparently nowhere else All questions of evidence must be decided by the senate without debate Managers and counsel may have an hour each to discuss questions of evidence but the senator can do it only in secret session after the arguments are closed and then he is limited to fifteen minutes

MRS. MAYBRICK'S STORY

Incidents of Her Life In an English Prison.

Tragic Scene When She Was Told to Prepare For Death—Agonies of Solitary Confinement and Sufferings She Endured In Woking Prison—Her Cry For Years Lost

Mrs Florence Elizabeth Maybrick under the title of "Mrs Maybrick's Own Story" recently published by Funk & Wagnalls company New York and London tells a thrilling [illegible] story of her years in English prisons which is bound to draw attention to and finally remedy some of the abuses of prison life not only in England but wherever the vestiges of mediaeval barbarities exist says the New York Evening World

Of the fifteen lost years of her life passed in prison for the alleged murder of her husband James Maybrick by arsenical poisoning she closes her story by saying

"A time will come when the world will acknowledge that the verdict which was passed upon me is absolutely untenable But what then Who shall give back the years I have spent within prison walls the friends by whom I am forgotten the children to whom I am dead the sunshine the winds of heaven my woman's life and all I have lost by this terrible injustice?"

The story opens in the midst of the tragedy in a style at once interesting and holding

"Slowly consciousness returned I opened my eyes The room was in darkness Suddenly the silence was broken by the banging of a closing door which startled me out of my stupor Where was I Why was I alone? What awful thing had happened A flash of memory My husband was dead A feeling of pain and distress shot through me Edwin Maybrick was bending over me as I lay upon my bed He had my arms tightly gripped and was shaking me violently 'I want your keys do you hear? Where are your keys'"

This was on Sunday morning May 12 1889 and she was kept a prisoner until formally arrested She was not allowed to cable to her American lawyers Though her American husband was in the same house dead she was not allowed to look upon his face and could only see the casket

In short pointed sentences she tells the story of those first days of her captivity the preliminary hearing the inquest at which she waited in the anteroom till the coroner had summed up

"The jury consisted mostly of gentlemen who at one time had been guests at my house" she says

Of all the years of suffering through which the woman passed perhaps the incident which caused her to bring most to bear the force of her wonderful will was the night upon which she was to be executed and she was told to prepare for death

"The female warder was weeping silently" begins her description of this remarkable incident "but I was calm and spent the early part of the night in my usual prayers About midnight exhausted nature could bear no more and I fainted I had barely regained consciousness when I heard the shuffle of feet outside the click of the key in the lock—that warning catch in the slow machinery of my doom I sprang up and with one supreme effort of will braced myself for what I believed was the last act of my life The governor and chaplain entered followed by a warder They read my expectation in my face and the governor hastening forward exclaimed in an agitated voice

"'It is well It is good news'

"When I opened my eyes once more I was lying in bed in the hospital and I remained there until I was taken to Woking convict prison"

Woking prison where she was taken on Aug 29 comes in for another startling exploitation From here till her removal to Aylesbury prison the story is a heartrending tale of agonies of solitary confinement prison discipline the evils of prison practice the injustices and tragedies of the soul blighting years that a life convict passes before death or a reprieve ends it As she was thrust roughly into a seven by four foot cell at Woking prison after her sentence of hanging had been changed to life imprisonment she felt that death even at the hangman's hands would have been preferable to this

"Try to realize" she says "never to feel the touch of anything soft or warm never to see anything that is attractive—nothing but stone above around beneath The deadly chill creeps into one's bones the bitter days of winter and the still bitter nights of torture for Woking prison was not heated My hands and feet were covered with chilblains"

TELEPHONES IN A CHURCH

Bridgeport (Conn) Pastor's Way to Make the Deaf Hear Him

The Rev Lovell Williams Raymond pastor of the Stratford Methodist Episcopal church in Bridgeport Conn and his parishioners are greatly pleased by a system of telephones installed in the church whereby the tones of the pastor's voice are carried to deaf members of his congregation says the New York Herald

Although the idea is still in the nature of an experiment there is little doubt that the telephones will be permanently placed in the pews of any of the congregation who are now unable to hear the sermons or to follow the service

"For some time" said the pastor "I have noticed that certain members of my congregation had difficulty in following the service owing to their inability to hear distinctly I tried changing [illegible] altering the pitch and [illegible] various other vocal methods but it proved difficult and a strain upon my voice

"I saw the little office telephones which are in many buildings and knowing that persons who are ordinarily quite deaf can frequently hear by the aid of telephones I decided to try them in my church The receiver of an ordinary office phone was considerably enlarged and a mouthpiece like a megaphone was placed in front of it From that wires were run to receivers in four of the pews Two of the receivers had the head attachments and two had handles an arrangement making them somewhat resemble a lorgnette

"The plan has been tried at only one service and so of course it cannot be told exactly how it will succeed I was pleased to notice that one of my parishioners who generally has difficulty in hearing when aided by an ear trumpet easily followed the service with the help of the telephone

"As the arrangement is not a toy but is designed to help afflicted persons in joining in our service it is in nowise out of place as a part of the church furniture In speaking I find I can use my ordinary tones which are reproduced quite clearly in the receivers Several of my parishioners have already asked to have the wires extended to their pews I shall try the phones for a few more services and if they are satisfactory they will be made permanent"

DIVE FOR A LOST WHALE

Engineer Went Down Twelve Times After Huge Mammal

The schooner Charles Hanson which left San Francisco last spring ostensibly for a whaling cruise but really to trade for furs recently arrived at that port says the St Louis Republic

During her eight months cruise she captured only one whale which produced 2,000 pounds of bone The furs gathered by trading were sent down some time ago Another big whale was killed but on account of the ice it was lost The mammal which was the biggest that those on board had ever seen came up through one of the holes in the ice and the crew killed it Before it could be fastened it sank

The crews of the schooners Olga and Charles Hanson both vessels being operated by the same concern were unwilling to give up such a prize and Chief Engineer Porter of the Olga equipped in a diving suit offered to go down and secure the whale He descended to the bottom of the Arctic ocean twelve times and fastened hooks on the whale

But when it came to hoisting it to the surface it was found to be an impossibility on account of the ice The diver found the whale under a shelf of ice and that ice was forty five feet in thickness The crews exploded [illegible] pounds of powder in an effort to free the [illegible] After trying for eight days they were compelled to give up

TALE OF A LOST BATTALION

Traveler Says Four Hundred Russians Are Wandering In Korea

Cut off from the main body of the Russian army after the Russians retreated northward out of Korea a battalion of 400 Russians has since been wandering aimlessly about the Hermit Kingdom bent only on obtaining sufficient food for its sustenance and keeping out of sight of the Japanese says a San Francisco dispatch to the New York Tribune A I Mitchell of Chicago who has been spending a year at Korean mines tells of the lost battalion He said

"Four hundred Russians became penned up in Korea after the Russian army retreated across the Yalu river and at frequent intervals we heard of their wanderings about the country and depredations to keep from starving They participated in only one small engagement with the Japanese

"The lost battalion came over the hill at Sun [illegible] one night and encountered sixty five Japanese The Russians were routed After that they wandered around over sixty miles of territory making raids on little Korean villages and killing cattle

"I was at the mines 170 miles north of Seoul and Russians threatened to attack them but a regiment of a thousand Japanese was hurried to the rescue and the Russians failed to appear Their ultimate fate is unknown"

A BLAST AT THE RICH

George Bernard Shaw Would Guillotine Wealthy Idle Classes

ARRAIGNMENT OF LONDON SOCIETY

English Economist Advocates a Headsman For All Who Cannot Earn an Income—Proposes a Commission Before Which Every Man Must Appear and Prove He Is a Capable Member of Society

George Bernard Shaw the English socialist playwright novelist economist and borough councilor recently delivered a speech in Sloane square the heart of fashionable London and savagely attacked the wealthy idle classes says a special cable dispatch to the New York American and Journal In his arraignment which has created a decided sensation he said

"The only remedy for social evils is the crude simple one of equality Some people argue that it is impossible for men to be equal because they are neither mentally nor physically equal Such people should not be argued with They ought to be buried That is the way to treat people who think that mental and physical equality is the same thing as legal political and economical equality

"We are too squeamish about killing There is an immense number of people living in Mayfair who ought to be guillotined There ought to be a board like the income tax commissioners before which the rich ought to be compelled to appear and prove that they have earned their incomes If it can be proved that anybody takes money he doesn't earn he ought to be guillotined

"The burglar frequently obtains his loot by as proper means as the people to whom he steals obtain their wealth Moreover the burglar is brave and clever He possesses qualities which have made England famous The thing to do is to establish a minimum income and compel everybody to work for it The minimum income should be enough to make a man a decent member of society Once that was established it would be right to regard as criminal any man who proved he could not be a decent member of society If anybody wanted an income above the minimum there would be [illegible] in his earning it [illegible]

"A minimum income is the thing and I believe it will play a great part in the economic movement of the future"

At the other end of the social scale Mayor Crooks of Poplar London most squalid borough now in the depths of destitution [illegible] the tyranny of landlords Mayor Crooks suggests a novel cure for the rapacity of landlords He says

"We must have a court of fair rent in east London and the sooner it comes the better for the peace of the city Rapacious landlords are destroying the workingmen

"Can I sell my coat two years after its purchase for more than I paid for it? Then why should the landlord increase every year his rent for property for which he charged a fair rent in the first instance? Rapacious landlordism can be stopped if parliament wants to stop it The constantly increasing rents on workmen's dwellings discourage thrift and encourage fatalism"

Out of 400 men measured the average height was 5 feet 8½ inches and the tallest is 6 feet 3½ inches in height The total strength of back leg and forearm averages [illegible] pounds for the academic students and [illegible]917 pounds for the scientific students There are 12.6 per cent of the academic students who smoke and 1.9 per cent are unable to swim

Transmuting Vegetables

The discovery of a means of metamorphosing radishes into potatoes has been made in so solemn a place as the Academy of Sciences This says the St James Gazette M Molliard takes a very young radish pasteurizes it in a certain way and it grows up into a fine potato More scientifically the young radish is cultivated in a glass retort after a process invented by Pasteur in a concentrated solution of glucose Starch then develops plentifully in the cells of the radish which swells out loses its pepperiness and acquires practically the consistency flavor and especially the nutritive properties of the potato

That new idea of a musical materia medica is growing says the New York American and Journal The city hospital authorities of Atlantic City have fallen in with the notions of the eminent Brooklyn physician who a few weeks ago broke the news to a world of waiting patients that sedative potions hereafter must give place to soothing tunes

Oatmeal in all its forms is to be swept away before a [illegible] of sonatas Ill tasting tonics are to be battered down by the [illegible] of marches Nauseating anesthetics must give way to plaintive dreamy melodies which bring down memories of forgotten futures to watchful eyes Pungent paregoric is to be banished from the nursery [illegible] Mozart [illegible] tunes in modern vein

The Brooklyn physician conducted his experiments with a self playing piano Sprightly tunes he found quickened sluggish pulses while mellow soft and low sounded temples throbbing with fever Atlantic City has gone into the musical cure on a more lavish scale A hospital orchestra has been formed and now while the patient listens to the strains of the dance waltzes his ills disappear in the dying tones of the melody

Moving about from room to room the strange medical orchestra fits its tunes to the ailments of the sick cheering the melancholy and quieting the jumping nerve of the excited The hospital physicians are delighted with the success of their musical treatment so far and declare the new field one of the most promising opened up in many years Even in the operating room they believe the effect of the music will be beneficially felt

Former Cleveland Judge Will Aid Litigants Unable to Hire Counsel

Judge A B Dissette of Cleveland O intends to devote the rest of his life to furnishing legal aid to those in need and unable to retain counsel says a dispatch from Cleveland The judge's term on the common pleas bench expired a few days ago He is well past middle life but his health is excellent and every indication points to his having many years in which to practice his unique charity

"Ten years on the bench have shown me the need of just such practical philanthropy" said the judge "When a rich man goes to court he has the ablest legal counsel to care for his interests But when a poor man is forced to ask the courts for his rights very often those rights must be forced from the reluctant wealthy In this case the poor man is at a disadvantage

"The poor man is often compelled to submit to wrongs because he has not the means to seek redress in the courts He is unable to hire a lawyer From now on I am going to help persons in that condition I know that in a certain class of cases competent legal counsel can be secured by means of contingent fees But there are many cases involving rights where there is no possibility of the necessary money being earned in the form of a verdict

"I don't know of any more crying need than that" concluded the judge "To help the man who is in trouble by giving him the benefit of free legal services I know of no other better way that a lawyer can do good"

SENATOR KNOX'S CREDENTIALS.

How Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania Amused the Senate. Representative Landis Declares His Solitary Cheers Re-elected Babcock to Congress—Tributes to Senator Hoar's Memory

Governor Pennypacker recently enlivened the proceedings of the senate in a manner both quaint and original says the Washington correspondent of the New York Times The occasion was the swearing in of the two new senators ex Attorney General Knox who fills the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Quay and ex Governor Murray Crane who succeeds the late Senator Hoar

Senator Lodge presented the credentials of his new colleague and Senator Penrose performed a like ceremony for Mr Knox As the reading clerk raced through the stately phrases of the credentials furnished for Mr Knox there was a ripple of laughter through the hall The credentials ended with the following sentence

It is therefore [illegible] to have and to hold the said office together with all the rights powers and privileges thereunto belonging or by law in anywise appertaining until the next meeting of the legislature of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania if he shall so long behave himself well

Across the senate chamber among the lawyers of the body there was a distinct smile of amusement no doubt at the thought that the governor could have no power to revoke his act if its beneficiary should not "so long behave himself well" Then the two new senators were escorted to the desk by their colleagues and President Frye administered the oath to them

"I claim the credit of electing Representative Babcock to the next congress" said Representative Charles B Landis the other day to the New York World's Washington representative "I went up in Wisconsin when Speaker Cannon made his trip through Babcock's district We had good crowds, but we couldn't find any Babcock enthusiasm One night after a particularly undemonstrative meeting, I thought I would warm things up and stepped out to the edge of the platform

"'Now, boys,' I said, 'I propose three cheers for the noblest Roman of them all Joseph W Babcock Hip, hip, hooray!'

"Not a soul peeped but me I started it off again 'Hip hip hooray!' Not a sound but my own raucous cheer I stuck it out though, and gave the three cheers

"Now the normal Babcock majority is about 10 000 but old Bab got through this time by about 300 and if it hadn't been for my cheers I am sure he would have been beaten"

It was a pretty touch of sentiment by which the grandchildren of Thomas Corwin the famous senator from Ohio, who stood out against the Mexican war with a heroism and eloquence and resoluteness akin to that of George F Hoar against the Philippine policy, should have sent a bunch of white chrysanthemums from Cincinnati to be placed on the desk of the late senator at the opening of this year's session, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Post They probably had in mind Senator Hoar's references to their distinguished grandfather and sought this occasion to express their recognition

These have been sent with other flowers including some beautiful American Beauties to Concord to be placed on the senator's grave No provisions have yet been made for the eulogies in the senate chamber and it is desired to permit time to elapse for his associates to think out with some care what they want to say Mr Hoar's tributes to his associates as one by one they fell in public life were masterpieces of ripe scholarship and careful preparation

Representative Dixon of Montana has been telling of the experience of a young eastern woman with one of his constituents says the New York World's Washington representative She left the train at a way station in eastern Montana one afternoon and asked the only man in sight how she could get to her destination far out in the country

"You'll have to wait for the stage in the morning" said the man "You can't get there till [illegible] here"

"But where am I to stop?" inquired the young lady "There's nothing here but the station and I can't sleep on the floor"

"Guess you'll have to bunk with the station agent"

"Sir" she exclaimed "I'm a lady!"

"So's the station agent" said the man

Several young men think they would like to be secretary to Senator Charles W Fairbanks after he is sworn in as vice president says the New York World's Washington correspondent

There was a question the other day [illegible] a secretary to the vice president

"I'll tell you" said a man who has been in the capitol for many years "The secretary of the vice president is supposed to sit in the vice president's anteroom and when a party of [illegible] their heads in the door say to them 'Come right in and I'll show you the mirror John Quincy Adams bought for $40'"

John Tombs Seeks To Recover Damages in the Sum of $2,000 From the C. C. C. & St. L. Railroad Company. Trouble Arises From Elevation of Tracks at LaRue

Henry P. Tuttle has begun a divorce proceeding in the court of common pleas against Frances, his wife.

According to the petition filed the parties were married at Sidney July 11, 1901, and no children have been born of the union. The plaintiff alleges that his wife deserted him without cause and has refused to return to him.

John Thombs has begun a suit in the court of common pleas to recover damages in the sum of $2,000 from the C. C. C. & St. L. Railroad company.

The plaintiff recites in his petition that the railroad company has constructed an embankment for the elevation of its tracks on ten feet above the natural level in the village of LaRue.

In consequence the plaintiff complains that during the high water of the spring of 1901 the water having no proper means of escape was backed up by the embankment until his lot and home were flooded. He alleges that his stock of furniture and his household goods were damaged in the sum named wholly because of the water being backed up by the embankment mentioned.

H. Edmund Hill appears for the plaintiff.

In the matter of Henry P. Hane against Ellen A. Gordon and others in the court of common pleas the receiver, Paul P. Lee, has filed a report of his receivership. The report shows $7.18 of a balance in the hands of the county clerk after all liabilities have been disposed of.

In the divorce matter of Mrs. Ella Riley against Harry Riley, which was given a hearing by the court Wednesday, Mrs. Riley has been granted a divorce and the custody of her only child. The decree was granted on ground of gross neglect of duty.

ONCE MORE COMES THE OLD-OLD STORY.

On the theory that a fallacy should [illegible] the [illegible] we [illegible] sentiment from the always [illegible] Baltimore Sun.

At the close of the civil war the United States was the greatest naval power in the world. At the time of Mr. Cleveland's election in 1884 twenty years after the war closed, we had dwindled down to the [illegible] the South American republics and our warships were antiquated, unseaworthy and our navy a laughing stock. Mr. Cleveland with the Hon. William C. Whitney as secretary of the navy undertook the rehabilitation of the navy, or rather the building of a new [illegible].

It's an old story of [illegible] and [illegible] hardly worth notice [illegible] but [illegible] the [illegible] in every [illegible] to the public for the [illegible] truth for the sixtieth time. Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Whitney did not inaugurate a modern navy. They did not plan [illegible] from contempt and inefficiency. They were not the fathers of our present fleet. They were neither parents nor nurses. When Mr. Cleveland entered upon office in March 1885 the new navy had [illegible] been laid. The work of rehabilitation had been definitely [illegible] and undertaken. Whatever honor [illegible] to [illegible] which has borne the fruit of our existing naval armament belongs to the administration of Mr. Arthur when Hon. William E. Chandler was his secretary. The seed had been sown before Mr. Cleveland came from Buffalo local politics. The evolution had been set in motion before Mr. Whitney began to think of anything [illegible] to formulate than [illegible]. In 1885 the United States navy of today had begun its growth.

Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Whitney did no more than carry on the development that had been bequeathed to them by their predecessors. They were not pioneers or discoverers, not inventors or patentees—they had not even filled a [illegible]. What they did, and all they did, was to preside over an enterprise which others had devised and formulated. A better and more useful ship for all the purposes for which it was [illegible] than the Dolphin may have been built during the Cleveland-Whitney dispensation, but we do not believe it. Certainly the period covered by their auspices disclosed no notable improvement on the Arthur-Chandler plans or marked any special expedition of the scheme they had adopted. From the day the keel of the Dolphin was laid down to the present moment the growth of our navy has been purely normal and legitimate. Succeeding administrations have fostered it with patriotic zeal, but it was born in Mr. Arthur's time and Secretary Chandler swaddled it.—Washington Post.

LITTLE STORIES TOLD ABOUT PUBLIC PEOPLE

Satisfaction

Congressman Wintersmith of Kentucky is droll and imperturbable. He and Mr. Winter [illegible] were walking on Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, one afternoon when a dainty little French man who was directly in front of them slipped and fell. The tumble was a ludicrous one and Mr. Wintersmith laughed heartily. The little Frenchman picked himself up, drew himself up and with a flourish handed the congressman a card. Old [illegible] looked at it thoughtfully and asked "What this for?" "Your friends are [illegible]" "Dandy. He [illegible] me. I demand [illegible] satisfaction." Mr. Wintersmith handed back the card, saying, "This lady [illegible] no relation of mine. Tell you what to do. You hunt up her brother and tell him 'Good day.'"—Kansas City Journal.

Not To Be Trifled With

Representative Dinsmore of Arkansas tells of a rural justice of the peace in that state who was approached by a man desiring a divorce. The justice was in a quandary. Calling the bailiff to one side he whispered:

"What is the law on this point?"

"You can't do it," was the reply. "It is out of your jurisdiction."

The husband observing the consultation between the two officials anxiously interjected, "I'm willin' to pay well for the money if he here in this [illegible]"

At this the justice assumed his gravest expression. "Adjusting his spectacles he said:

"You knowed before you came here that it wasn't for me to separate husband and wife, and yet you not only take up the valuable time of this here court with your talkin', but you actually propose to bribe me with money! Now how much have you got on that deal?"

"Bout $5 or so, honah."

"All right. I'll fine you $5 for bribery and $1.50 for taking up my time with a case outer my jurisdiction, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul."—Collier's Weekly.

The following clipping from the Peoria, Illinois, Times of December 19 will be of local interest in view of the fact that the groom is an old Marion boy and is well known in the city:

One of the prettiest home weddings of the entire season was solemnized on Wednesday evening at 808 north Monroe street when the Rev. Dr. Dwinnell of the First Methodist church pronounced the words that made Miss Anna Wright and Charles M. Meily man and wife. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock in the presence of about fifty guests. The bride and groom stood beneath a large floral bell and Mr. F. J. McCulloch, who played the wedding march, was concealed behind a screen. The rooms were elaborately decorated. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests sat down to a wedding supper served on small tables. The bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Mercey, the groom's parents, Miss Hattie Wright and Dr. Dwinnell were at the bride's table. Mr. Meily, who is a machinist at Averyville, is preparing a home for his bride in Averyville but until it is completed they will live with the bride's sister at 808 north Monroe street.

RUSSIA AND ITS REFORMS

Czar Nicholas Issues His Long-Expected Ukase.

DISSECTS FROM HIS VIEWPOINT THE NEEDS OF THE EMPIRE

Full Rights For Peasants, Legal Trial For Accused Persons, Local Self-Government, State Insurance For Workmen and Other Reforms to Be Taken Up

St. Petersburg, Dec. 27.—Emperor Nicholas's long expected reform ukase has been issued. The document deals under eight heads with practically all the subjects brought to the emperor's attention by the memorial of the congress of zemstvo presidents held here last month, and while not specifically pledging the government to carry out the various reforms in their entirety, and [illegible] the memorial points out that [illegible] to the council of ministers with orders to report promptly on the [illegible] measures [illegible] which can be [illegible] on the various subjects.

One question not touched by the ukase is that of the constitutional assembly. Neither is the Jewish religion specifically mentioned though the freedom for all creeds or sects, whether Christian or otherwise [illegible] on the subjects which will be dealt with. The various subjects will be referred to committees for early report.

In brief the subjects which will be referred to committee of council of ministers for early report are:

First—[illegible] and [illegible] enactment of existing [illegible] with a view to ensure [illegible] and [illegible] administration of [illegible]

[illegible]

Among the [illegible] to express an opinion the ukase was considered to be a document whose ultimate value depended largely upon the interpretation given by the committees as to the measure of liberty which it is possible to grant under the various heads named. Naturally it has not met the fullest wishes of the liberals, but on the other hand it is regarded by the reactionaries as [illegible] entirely too much in the direction of liberal reforms. It is complained also that there is some ambiguity of expression in the various sections of the document which must be left to interpretation by those to whom the various reforms are entrusted.

Has Been the Russian Member of the North Sea Commission

Republican Leaders In New York Decide on Depew For United States Senator — Candidate Black's Name Withdrawn — Odell Issues a Statement—General Political News

Denver Dec 30 — The Liberty league state convention in session here adopted the following resolution

Resolved that we denounce in unmeasured terms the action of the Republican party in attempting to override the plainly expressed will of the people by arbitrarily throwing out the returns from a large number of precincts to the end that the state senate may be made subservient to corporate greed that the supreme court may be packed and that James H Peabody overwhelmingly repudiated at the polls may be forced upon the people of this state for another biennial period

Whether the plans of Republican leaders to reseat Peabody will be adopted by a majority of the Republican legislators is still undecided The Republicans have an even two-thirds of the votes on joint ballot A Republican caucus probably will be held next Monday at which the contest for the speakership of the house and the plan to continue Governor Peabody in office will be considered Some Republican members known as followers of former United States Senator Edward O Wolcott have declared that while they do not contemplate a union with the Democrats under any consideration they will oppose vigorously any plan for counting out Adams The plan to seat Governor Peabody some of them declared is wrong and no caucus action will bring them to support such action The canvass of the vote for state officers is made by the legislature and is not subject to review in the courts

Chauncey Depew Returns to United States Senate

Governor Odell's formal announcement which is regarded as closing the controversy on the subject gives it as his conclusion that party harmony will be best observed by the reelection of Senator Depew concedes that the sentiment favoring his selection is very strong throughout the state and declares that it would have been the worst kind of party generalship to have run counter to this expression of public opinion

A Backward Look at the Year 1904

THE future historian will have frequent occasion to refer to the year 1904 and the coming generations will find it convenient to use it as a starting point for the study of much that is novel and important in the history of events. In a word, it was a year far out of the common and replete with happenings of vital interest.

As a fitting introductory distinction nature provided the new year with a January marked by extreme frigidity. According to the officials of the United States weather bureau the winter of 1903-04 was the coldest of twenty three phenomenally severe winters which have occurred during the last eighty seven years. Notwithstanding the rigor of the winter and the delayed spring the season was the most productive ever known to the agricultural interests of the United States. This was particularly true of the cotton crop, which was more than 12 100 000 bales.

The corn crop was scarcely less colossal the estimate being 2 463 000 000 bushels the largest ever recorded with the exception of that of 1902. The most interesting and gratifying incident in connection with the development of the corn crop has been furnished by the state of Iowa whose product for 1904 was [illegible] 000 bushels an increase of [illegible] bushels over that of the preceding year. Much of the credit of this marked excess is due to the efforts of the state agricultural college and its accomplished agronomist Professor P G Holden whose improved methods of corn raising have revived Iowa's prestige as a producer of this important crop.

In spite of the enormous aggregate of edible crops produced in the temperate regions of America the market has been excellent the supply never exceeding the demand. A partial failure of the cereal crop in the grain growing districts of the Russian empire and a marked deficiency in the supply furnished by the Asiatic colonies belonging to Great Britain have contributed to the advantage of the American wheat grower and American agricultural interests in general have shared in the consequent prosperity.

Throughout the year the manufacturing interests of the country maintained a high degree of activity. This was especially the case with the iron and steel trade. One of the most gratifying features of the rapid development of this important industry is to be found in the number of important contracts which have been filled for foreign customers some of them beyond the capacity of European mills to undertake. A notable instance of this was afforded by the promoters of the new London subway who were unable to find any manufacturer in Great Britain who had a plant that could turn out the steel cars required and were compelled to have them built in America. This may be set down as one of the most telling victories of peace ever won by the United States. The shipbuilding trade was also kept at its maximum capacity during the entire year. This was due in a measure to large contracts with the home government demanding speedy fulfillment but even more so to large orders received from abroad. The commissions from abroad were almost exclusively for torpedo boats and the new submarines and a large number of both types have been constructed.

Contrary to the usual conditions which prevail in presidential election years the United States suffered few marked industrial disturbances. The differences real and hypothetical existing between labor and capital which are expected to be aggravated at such a time were remarkably quiescent. The notable exceptions to this were the strikes in the building trades that of the employees of the great packing house trust the lockout of the cotton operatives of New England and the mining disturbances in Colorado.

The Republican national convention convened at Chicago June 23 renominated Theodore Roosevelt for president and selected Charles Warren Fairbank United States senator from Indiana as the vice presidential candidate. On the 6th of July the Democratic national convention in session at St Louis nominated Alton B Parker and Henry G Davis. The Socialist Prohibition Populist and Socialist Labor parties also put candidates and platforms into the competition. The campaign which succeeded was singularly free from the influences which make for financial distrust and commercial hesitation. The vital principles which dominated the platforms of both of the leading parties were so similar in essentials that little excitement was felt in any part of the country over the questions at issue. Mr Roosevelt was reelected by the large plurality of [illegible] 6 470 votes the total vote being 13 533 820. The victor actually received the largest vote ever polled in the United States—[illegible]. This is more than 400 000 votes in excess of that cast for McKinley in 1900. One of the interesting features of the election was the marked increase in the Socialist vote. Eugene V Debs who was also the candidate of his party in 1900 received about 400 000 votes being over 300 000 more vote than before. Silas C Swallow the Prohibition candidate received [illegible] 411 votes. Thomas L Watson the Populist candidate received 91 351 votes [illegible] 63 of which were from Georgia his own state. Charles H Corregan nominated by the Socialist Labor party received 33 519 votes.

At no time during 1904 has the peace of the western world been seriously jeopardized. On May 19 an incident occurred which demanded prompt action from the state department. Ion Perdicaris an American citizen of Greek origin who had been living for several years in a villa just outside of Tangier Morocco together with his stepson a young English subject named Cromwell Varley was abducted and forcibly detained by the followers of a noted Moorish bandit Raisuli. The men were taken into the mountain fastnesses by the outlaws and a large ransom was demanded for their release. Both the United States and Great Britain made urgent demands upon the Moroccan government and to emphasize the point sent warships to the harbor of Tangier. The sultan and his ministers adopted a waiting policy and professed themselves unable to deal with Raisuli. After much diplomatic evasion and oriental duplicity the affair was brought to a conclusion by the payment of the ransom by the sultan and the release of the prisoners.

Still another oriental matter came up for settlement and the state department adopted the same firm method of procedure. For many years citizens of the United States residing in Turkey had held claims against the Ottoman government principally for damages for property destroyed in religious disturbances and had petitioned the sublime porte for certain privileges which they had not been permitted to share with other foreigners. The sultan and his advisers had paid little attention to these just and pressing demands and the Washington authorities moved by the constant importunities of the missionaries and teachers who were the chief sufferers and indignant at the assault on the American consul at Beirut and the subsequent apathy of the porte ordered the Mediterranean squadron to enter the harbor of Smyrna the chief port of the Levant and to remain there until a settlement was reached. The action was most effective and the claims were adjusted with a celerity quite foreign to the leisurely Ottoman habit.

Early in February one of the frequent revolutions which occur in the Dominican Republic broke out and the insurgents fired upon a United States warship in the harbor. A sharp skirmish followed between a detachment of marines and the Dominican rebels in which the latter were repulsed. The Dominican government made prompt reparation and nothing further came of the incident.

About the same time a band of unreconciled Moros assumed an offensive attitude against the United States troops quartered in their district. On Feb 14 a company of General Wood's command attacked the rebels and captured 600 of them. This summary treatment put an end to the movement. In June a rather serious revolution against the existing government in Uruguay developed. At first the rebels were successful in a number of sharply contested fights. On June [illegible] the government army was defeated with a loss of 2 000 killed and taken prisoners. In the end however the government triumphed. On Oct 2[illegible] a peace treaty was signed between Chili and Bolivia thus putting an end to the continuous and long enduring quarrel over the boundary question.

The canal treaty between the United States and the republic of Panama was ratified by the senate on Feb 23 and on May 4 the canal zone was formally occupied but in the early autumn there were rumors of an impending revolution along the line of the concession. Owing to the Washington government's prompt action [illegible] the scheme was abandoned. On Nov 1 an important treaty between the United States and the French republic was signed accepting its terms all future disputes which may arise between the two republics will be settled by arbitration.

Besides the political nominating conventions of the year there were numerous other national gatherings of more or less moment. The earliest of these was the annual session of the organization known as the Daughters of the American Revolution at Washington. A few days later May 4 the annual convention of the Iron Steel and Tin Workers Amalgamated association met in Toledo O. A fortnight afterward two important bodies convened on the same day the general assembly of the Presbyterian church and the American Baptist society the former at Buffalo and the latter at Boston. During September several notable congresses were held at the world's fair at St Louis among them the international congress of arts and sciences the international geographic congress the interparliamentary peace congress and an international religious congress. The American Bar association also met at the Mound City. The international congress of chemists was held in the same month at New York. On Oct 3 the thirteenth international peace congress assembled in Boston and two days later the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church opened in Trinity church in the same city. This meeting gathering was made unusually prominent by the presence of the archbishop of Canterbury primate of the English church who was making his first visit to America. The two most vital subjects under discussion by the convention were the proposition to amend the church's canon in reference to divorce and to change the name of the body. The divorce canon was modified but the name Protestant Episcopal was retained.

During the first session of the Fifty eighth congress as is customary in presidential election years little new legislation was attempted. An important non partisan proceeding was the formation of an interparliamentary group headed by Representative Bartholdt of Missouri which afterward entertained the interparliamentary union at the St Louis fair. Congress contributed to the success of this gigantic exposition by authorizing a loan of $4 600 000. The principal legislative business of the session was the ratification of the Panama canal treaty by the senate by a vote of 66 to 14 and after an extended debate. Next to this in importance was the acceptance of the Cuban treaty of reciprocity March [illegible]. The statehood and the pure food bills both passed the house but were laid over in the senate. Two striking personal features of the session were the colloquial clash between Representatives Cockran and Dalzell and the voluntary retirement of Shafroth of Colorado on account of the discovery of frauds in his election. The sensational episode in the senate was the inquiry into the charges against the Mormon senator from Utah Reed Smoot which was not concluded. The total appropriations for the session were $781 172 3[illegible].

Elihu Root retired from the cabinet on Feb 1 and William H Taft who had been governor of the Philippines was recalled to fill the office of secretary of war. Attorney General Knox resigned his position in the cabinet to accept the seat in the senate left vacant by the death of Matthew Stanley Quay. William H Moody then secretary of the navy was offered the attorney generalship and accepted it. The vacancy in the navy department was filled by the appointment of Paul Morton. George B Cortelyou secretary of the new department of commerce and labor resigned to be made chairman of the Republican national committee and Victor H Metcalf was chosen to succeed him.

There have been few notable changes in the army. Under the new regulations General Fred C Ainsworth became military secretary of the war department. The annual war maneuvers were much more extended than ever before and were held on the civil war fields of Bull Run Sept [illegible]. They were under the supervision of General Corbin who was later transferred from the department of the Atlantic to the Philippines. There has been progress toward a greater American navy. During the year the battleships Virginia Nebraska Louisiana Georgia Connecticut and Tennessee have been launched successfully as have also the cruisers Charleston and Milwaukee and the gunboats Dubuque and Paducah. Besides these several training ships have been put into service and the facilities for the training of naval apprentices and enlisted men have been greatly enlarged. The new secretary of the navy Paul Morton is an enthusiast on the subject of the enlargement of the naval effectiveness and plans have been urged upon congress for the speedy construction of several additional first class battleships and cruisers.

The action of the state department in disregarding the Moro treaty put an end to the so called alliance with the [illegible]. The department also gave its official sanction to the use of "American" as the proper designation of the United States in all diplomatic transactions. The president approved of the plan of the navy having control of all the wireless telegraph stations.

The treasury began its fiscal year with a gradually increasing deficit but in November it became necessary to call upon the bank reserve. The most important action of the interior department was the promulgation of the [illegible]. [illegible] Commissioner [illegible] Ware resigned on Nov 11. Carroll D Wright retired from the position of commissioner of labor and Charles P Neill was chosen to fill his place.

As a subject of international interest the Russo-Japanese war has been the most important happening of the year. [illegible] the attention of the world has been [illegible] the probable outcome of the differences between these two powers and while the quarrel was still diplomatic the public interest in the matter was remarkable for its intensity. Early in the year it became apparent that Russia would continue to maintain the position which she had assumed at the beginning of the controversy and a resort to hostilities was inevitable. About the middle of January the czar protested to the entire diplomatic corps in St Petersburg that he wanted nothing so much as peace and should do his utmost to secure it. It was known to the world however that preparations were being made by both nations with feverish activity. The Japanese had lost faith in the prospect of peace and the influential papers in the Mikado's empire were calling upon the military authorities to strike a telling blow while the enemy was still unprepared. Japan had been ready for the inevitable conflict for some time and it was felt that every moment of delay was a virtual concession to the enemy. On Feb 8 the Japanese fleet under Admiral Togo attacked Port Arthur. Japanese torpedo boats entered the harbor and succeeded in torpedoing the [illegible] Retvizan and Pallada. With a fleet of [illegible] cruisers Admiral Uriu landed [illegible]00 soldiers at Chemulpo in Korea. Next day in a second engagement Togo inflicted serious damage to the Russian cruisers Novik Diana and Askold. Uriu sank the cruiser Variag and the gunboat Korietz off Chemulpo. On the following day the czar declared war against Japan. He also appointed Admiral Alexieff to the supreme command of the Russian naval and land forces in Asia. The Japanese continued the active transportation of troops into Korea with almost daily long range bombardments of Port Arthur which did not cease for a moment its preparations for a long and heroically [illegible].

On March 28th the Russian army under General Mischtchenko was defeated in a bloody battle near Chongju. The Russians retired from Korea as rapidly as possible. On April 1 General Kuropatkin took command of the czar's forces and began the organization of the great army which he announced was to drive the Japanese into the sea. Two weeks later the flagship Petropavlovsk was sunk by a torpedo at the entrance to Port Arthur. Admiral Makaroff and over 600 men were lost. The same day the Russian battleship Pobieda while trying to enter the harbor was struck by a torpedo and badly injured. From April 26 to May 2 the great battle of the Yalu was fought. The Russians were routed by General Kuroki's army and were obliged to retreat precipitately. There followed closely the sanguinary battles of Fengwangcheng Kaiping and Vafangow. Then the investment of Port Arthur was made. On June 23 the imprisoned ships remaining at Port Arthur made the attempt to reach the open sea and Togo sank the [illegible] and [illegible] the Sevastopol. Through July the Japanese advanced steadily, the enemy falling back toward Liaoyang where Kuropatkin was determined to make a stand. On Aug 10 occurred the disastrous flight of the Russian fleet from Port Arthur. Rear Admiral Withoft on the Cesarevitch lost his legs by the explosion of a shell. The Askold and the Grosovoi put in at Shanghai and were obliged to disarm. Two days afterward Kamimura smashed the Vladivostok fleet leaving only two armored cruisers in commission. The land operations were conducted with corresponding celerity and success. Early in September after many hard fights and frightful losses on both sides Kuropatkin abandoned his position at Liaoyang and retired to Mukden the great Russian base of supplies, where he still remains with the Japanese close at hand.

More recently the attention of the waiting world has been centered on the long continued and fearfully destructive efforts of the Japanese to reduce Port Arthur and the equally dogged and heroic defense made by the gallant Stoessel and his surviving troops. With her fleet a memory and her one redoubtable Asiatic stronghold on the verge of downfall Russia's position is full of peril. To this must be added the domestic entanglements growing out of the popular demand for a share in the administration of the government which culminated toward the end of the year in the zemstvo gathering at the capital and the subsequent agitation and discontent throughout the empire. The probable influence of the eastward moving Baltic fleet until recently the occasion of more amusement than anything more serious is gradually becoming a matter of speculation.

The aggregate of results consequent upon scientific research during the year is most gratifying. In all departments of original investigation a distinct advance may be reported. This is especially true of experimental studies looking to the prevention or alleviation of physical derangements. One of the most striking achievements of the year was the successful demonstration of the power of a solution of copper to destroy the germs of typhoid and other malignant fevers. The cheapness and efficiency of the agent render possible its use in infected districts covering a large area. Professor George T Moore of the department of agriculture is to be credited with this discovery. In connection with the finding of a new serum cure for tuberculosis by the Italian scientist Maragliano which is reputed to be wonderfully efficient the medical profession in all countries has instituted a campaign of extermination against the "great white plague." As laudable efforts in the direction of the prevention of disease may be mentioned the experiments made by Professor Chittenden of Yale in dietetics and those of Dr Wiley and his poison squad at Washington establishing the danger arising from the employment of so called "food preservatives." By subsequent trials Dr Noguchi of Japan confirmed his reported discovery of a positive cure for the bite of malignant serpents. Dr Castellani of Spain reported that he had identified the bacillus of dysentery. Koch's theory that tuberculosis could not be communicated to man by other animals discredited by the British royal commission was sustained by German experts. Dr Morton of New York made several successful trials of Liebler's aluminium tubes for internal radium treatment of cancer. Captain Eberle of the United States army found the dengue microbe. The blue light was employed as an anaesthetic in Switzerland and M Curie its joint discoverer pronounced radium fatal to all forms of animal life. Professor Baskerville of the University of North Carolina announced in April that he had separated two new elements which he had named carolinium and berzelium.

The Louisiana Purchase exposition offered substantial inducement to the promoters of aerial navigation with the result that in two instances dirigible airships established their claim to consideration. The inventors of these were Thomas S Baldwin of San Francisco and Thomas Benbow of Montana. The most important achievement of pomological science was the perfection of the seedless apple by John Spencer of Colorado. The new farthest south record was made by the British ship Discovery Captain R F Scott in command. Commander Peary obtained American support for another effort to reach the north pole and is making preparation to that effect. Among the numerous inventions of the year were a New Zealand process for making steel without pig iron a discovery which may revolutionize the iron trade a submarine wireless telephone device for warships the globe life saver by a Norwegian named Doenvig which has attracted much attention a rotary steam engine by Hoffman of Buffalo the pyrheliophor a machine for generating intense heat from the concentration of the sun's rays devised by Father Himalaya a Portuguese priest and exhibited at St Louis a warp twisting machine of great efficiency by Hiller of Germany a 30 000 radium clock by Martindale and many others. The perfecting of the various types of submarine vessel should also be recorded. The all American Alaskan cable was completed on Oct 1. The New York subway over twenty two miles of which had been completed was opened for business on Oct 27. The Chicago freight subway was also declared ready to begin operations twenty three of the contemplated sixty miles having been completed. On May 10 a special train on the Northwestern railroad made a record run of eighty one miles in an hour.

Many other events of 1904 should be recorded even though they must remain unclassified and undescribed. The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Columbia university was celebrated in October with appropriate ceremonies extending over four days. On Jan 11 the mad mollah's forces were routed by the British in Somaliland and more than 1 000 dervishes were killed. Feb 17 the Turks defeated 20 000 Albanians who had risen in revolt. The British expedition under Colonel Younghusband had several sharp skirmishes with the Tibetans but succeeded finally in entering Lhassa the forbidden city. June 16 was made memorable in Finland by the assassination of the Russian governor, Count Bobrikoff.

A New Year's Song

By J. A. Edgerton

I

Have you heard of the wondrous music
The worlds make on their way,
As though the stars were organ keys
On which God's fingers play?
The suns, the moons and the planets,
In troops of golden spheres,
All move along to a clear, sweet song
Heard only by angel ears.

II

Could we catch a bar of that music,
Translated to tones of earth,
'Twould give the key to a harmony
Befitting the new year's birth,
For the rolling worlds give the measure
Of the song that is sung by Time,
While the days, the months and the years are notes
That make up the state sublime.

III

Then unto that music celestial
Should be added some earthly strains
Of human hopes, of human joys,
And of human doubts and pains;
The chime of a baby's laughter
And the deep note, low and mild,
The deep, full note of a mother's love
As she croons to her newborn child.

IV

Some other tones should be mingled
To make the score complete—
The chatter of children about their play
And the patter of little feet,
The first shy talk of lovers,
The plaudits of fame well earned,
The fall of a tear, the sigh of a prayer,
The voice of a friend returned.

V

Then weave in the woof of the measure
A note of the prophecy
Of a happier day that is on its way
When the human race goes free;
The music made by the builders,
The hum of the city's throng,
The paeans of Progress must enter in
To make up the New Year's song.

W. R Rockhill Chief of the Bureau of American Republics, To Succeed Edwin H. Conger as Minister to China--Conger Is Being Considered for Ambassador to Mexico in Place of Clayton Powell

Washington Dec 28—It is announced that Whitelaw Reid, proprietor of the New York Tribune, will succeed Joseph H Choate as ambassador to Great Britain. Mr Choate, it is said, wishes to return to New York to resume the practice of law. Mr Reid was born in 1837 in Xenia O. and was educated at Miami university, Ohio. In 1881 Mr Reid married Miss Elizabeth Mills daughter of Daniel O Mills of this city. He twice declined the diplomatic mission to Germany, offered to him by Presidents Hayes and Harrison.

W R Rockhill chief of the bureau of American republics and a friend of the president will succeed Edwin H Conger as minister to China. Influence is being exerted to have Mr Conger transferred to some good place, and he is being considered for ambassador to Mexico in place of Powell Clayton who some months ago sent in his resignation to take effect at the pleasure of the president.

Attorney General Moody discussed with the president several appointments in his department. One of these was that of a successor to Francis J Wing United States district judge for the northern district of Ohio, whose resignation has been received and accepted. No explanation is obtainable here of Judge Wing's resignation. Judge Wing was appointed to his present position on Jan 21 1901, at the suggestion of the late Senator Hanna.

Before Christmas.

"Little boy do you ever go to Sunday school?"

The urchin looked up.

"I haint been for a long time, ma'am."

"Don't you want to go this morning?"

"Nome," he said a flash of pride and resentment showing through the dirt on his cheek. "I'm a bad boy all right but I ain't one of these Sunday school Christmas tree bad boys!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Sentimental Lover

Small Boy—What are those dark spots on sister's face?

Mother—Freckles my son.

Small Boy—That's what I thought. But I heard her feller say last night they were "brown-eyed daisies slumbering in a field of cream." And I guess he must have picked 'em all. I got awfully cramped behind the sofa.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Washington—Minister Conger at Peking China reports to the state department the death in that city December 2[illegible] of Mr Russell Colgrove, formerly American vice consul general at Canton.

A COLLEGE FOR GENTLEMEN.

It seems to us that there is an excellent opening about this time for an institution of learning which will also undertake to protect its inmates from the brutal tyranny of hazing in all its forms Very probably such institutions already exist We may say indeed that we have not lately heard of any flagrant manifestations of the barbarism at Harvard Yale or Princeton and it is pretty generally understood that hazing is consistently frowned upon at the University of Virginia What we wish to suggest however is a college that will make a specialty of prohibition For such a college we can safely predict an opulent and honorable future

The outbreak at Columbia university New York on Tuesday last of which disgraceful affair young Kingdon Gould son of Mr George Gould was the appointed victim reminds us afresh of the evil possibilities of the practice It is said that in order to protect himself from his persecutors and escape the humiliating outrages in store for him young Gould displayed a revolver even fired it over the heads of the pursuing sophomores We note with interest *moreover as a significant com*mentary on the character of the ruffians in question that the spectacle of the revolver reduced their spirits to the very lowest ebb at once The matter of importance however for hazers is always run away from danger—is that the sophomores must be carrying with a high hand at Columbia when a freshman finds it necessary to resort to deadly weapons to save himself from unendurable indignity or worse And how easily the incident might have ended in a tragedy The bullet is swifter than the most cowardly hazer in full flight Suppose young Gould had been as great a craven as his would be tormentors and had actually shot one of them! It is not always that the victims suffer death or mutilation or the agony of shame There is occasionally an exception to the rule and these exceptions may increase and multiply as time goes on and the little boy abandoned by the college authorities perceives his own ability to protect himself

Meanwhile it is safe to assume that gentlemen do not send their sons to school for the sole purpose of inuring them to physical and moral torture and in the hope that ultimately they will acquire the art of killing ruffians who seek their injury or humiliation It is just conceivable on the contrary that they entertain other and more civilized theories in the matter of college education We quite believe therefore that a university offering its patrons full guarantee in this respect would speedily attract the favorable attention of the country and secure for itself the support of the most enlightened classes of our population Certainly such an institution would breed a higher and a finer manhood than those which wink at the degradation of the weak by the strong and hold out to the survivors of that brute system only the prospect of getting even when it comes their turn —Washington Post

We never realized how true was the expression— The pen is mightier than the sword —till we noted the Russian casualty lists sent out from Tokyo

And while going over the tests of friendship do not overlook the smoking of Christmas cigars

So Whitelaw Reid is to succeed Ambassador Choate at the court of St James We thought some of us newspaper fellows would catch the presidential eye sooner or later

Attorney General Knox after long investigation by his department has reached the conclusion that there is such a thing as a paper trust Mr Knox might have arrived at a like conclusion more speedily had he been mixed up with the business end of a newspaper plant

Almost every big city in the country reports the biggest holiday trade in its history That's a hard song to beat

Judging by the result of the local option election held at Fremont about eighty per cent of the voting citizenship of that place have little faith in Dr Wiley's analysis of whisky

Two negroes were hanged in Georgia Tuesday The only remarkable feature about this is that they were legally hanged

Those who experienced a strenuous Christmas have probably determined to enjoy a simple New Year's

LITTLE STORIES TOLD ABOUT PUBLIC PEOPLE

There Are "Has-Beens"

Representative Sydney E Mudd of Maryland who has coined many expressive political phrases today declared There is no past tense in politics

A young man wanted Mr Mudd to indorse him for a minor position

Do you live in my district? inquired the representative

No I live in Baltimore but have lived in your district

Man's Vanity

Miss Frances Kellor of the Woman's Municipal league of New York illustrated admirably at a recent dinner party a point which she wished to make

Women a man had said are vainer than men

Of course Miss Kellor answered I admit that women are vain and men are not There are a thousand proofs that this is so Why the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is even now up the back of his collar

JAPAN'S HOSPITAL SHIPS

How the Navy's Medical Service Is Equipped

WORKING CONDITION DEEMED FINE

All Rooms In the Four Vessels Are Well Ventilated—They Are Heated by Steam and Lighted by Electricity—Special Course For Surgeons and Nurses

As is the case in other departments of activity the medical service of the Japanese navy is in excellent working condition says the London Globe On the outbreak of war Japan owned two hospital ships and two others were added at once so that there is now one hospital ship available for each of the naval stations These four vessels are the Hakuaimaru Kosaimaru Kobe maru and Kotenmaru and all of them saw service in the war with China in 1894-5 According to a correspondent of the Herald of St Petersburg there is in Tokyo a naval medical academy for training and completing the training of surgeons and nurses During 1903 there were enrolled in this academy fourteen candidates to undergo a complete course of instruction and nine staff surgeons for post graduate courses Those young surgeons who wish to enter the military service and who have passed only the public examination without attaining the degree of physician must attend the course in the Naval Medical Academy for one full year before they can be admitted to active service in the navy The instruction in the academy consists of pathology hygiene, military medicine field surgery and the transport of the wounded Clinical instruction is given in the charite or hospital which will be referred to later The academy possesses a special library of manuals and journals in Japanese English French and German a Roentgen ray room a collection of surgical instruments projectiles and portions of projectiles with departments under surgeons major The pathological department receives corpses from the charite and it contains a good collection of pathological anatomical specimens The chemical department is used also as an experimental station for food and it trains specialists *in that important branch The bac*teriological department is especially good It is fitted out excellently and is provided with ample room for students

The charite or hospital supplies clinical instruction and also trains nurses It is under the protection of the empress of Japan who visits it frequently and it consists of several buildings which are in pavilions and which are mostly connected by means of covered ways It possesses every equipment known to modern surgical science with separate rooms for those sick people who desire them and it gives its hospital thirty beds The male department is on the ground floor and the females are on the upper story Infectious cases are dealt with in a special ward and eighty five nurses are employed in the charite

The Hakuaimaru and the Kosaimaru were built by the Japanese Red Cross specially for service as hospital ships in time of war Before the war these ships were used as passenger vessels between Yokohama and Shanghai When the war came they were adapted again to their proper use They are single screw steamers built in England and of about [illegible] tons capacity They are painted white with a broad red band and a red cross on their funnels Besides a steam launch they carry several lifeboats [illegible]

These ships have many operations on their upper decks [illegible] between [illegible] Fore and aft on the upper decks [illegible] steam crane for taking in or disembarking wounded men through the [illegible] open [illegible] of the [illegible] the side of the [illegible] wounded [illegible] from the boats On the upper deck are the captain's quarters the smoking room and [illegible] all of which [illegible] can leave their bed The promenade deck is beautiful and comfortable On the upper deck are also a room for receiving the wounded [illegible] for the officers and [illegible] two comfortable rooms [illegible] shaped [illegible] infectious [illegible] for the laundry [illegible] the laundry are two wide and airy rooms containing iron bedsteads in two rows one above the other and in blocks of sixteen each

The [illegible] contains 24 beds and the second [illegible] Farther aft is a small room for use by day fitted with suitable tables and benches The [illegible] saloon which is still farther aft is the operating room It is painted with white washable paint and has the electric light [illegible] and this makes it rather [illegible] in the operating room The equipment of this room consists of an iron operating table apparatus for sterilizing [illegible] antiseptic solutions and a [illegible] washing table with hot and cold water The instruments are *in the next room Next to the operat*ing room [illegible] fitted up [illegible] It is [illegible] light proof The [illegible] are [illegible] the ship's engines The first [illegible] aft on the main deck are fitted up so as to take each two wounded men The [illegible] the chief saloon [illegible] There [illegible] passage [illegible] the middle through all the cabins on one side Then there is a room fitted up for receiving persons who have lost their reason

The hinder part of the chief saloon [illegible] off by a curtain [illegible] swinging [illegible] The rest of the chief saloon contains the usual comfortable fixed tables and chairs of a [illegible] passenger [illegible] supply of [illegible] wounded [illegible] and also [illegible] couches covered with [illegible] wheels so that they [illegible] moved [illegible] a plentiful supply of [illegible] lavatory [illegible] between the rooms for the [illegible] and wounded [illegible] rooms which [illegible] for the wounded [illegible] port Two [illegible] All the [illegible] with [illegible] wounded [illegible]

EULOGY ON JUDGE MOONEY

Judge Norris Pays High Tribute to Character of Late Associate.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD AT WAPAKONETA

A Broad Liberal and Courageous Man Possessing All Qualities Essential to His High Office--Wise Prudent Impartial and Distinctively an American Citizen

The following eulogy delivered by Circuit Judge Caleb H Norris at Wapakoneta Thursday evening December 22 on the death of Judge Mooney [illegible] mes to the high regard in which he was held by his associates and the pub[illegible] [illegible] Judge

I owe more tears to this dead man [illegible] thou shalt see me pay

[illegible] a sociated together in judicial [illegible] tion in exercising their judicative [illegible] ties in exercising their ability to [illegible] and measure the rights of men, [illegible] in giving gauge and limit to men s [illegible] by legal trial and adjudication [illegible] to each other, without power to [illegible] or disguise every faculty of the [illegible] every phase of the character, [illegible] element of the understanding

I have not the words to describe Judge William I Mooney as I knew him nor the worth nor the wealth of words to give mark and sign to his character as I knew and know his character to have been For nearly four years I had the fortune and the happiness and the honor of being one of his associates on the circuit bench of this circuit During this period we were together nearly all the hours of nearly every day and in this service I had opportunity to analyze and inspect and weigh the man None other except it be our colleague Judge Day had like opportunity or equal to fathom and estimate and understand him

Judge Mooney was distinctively an American citizen He believed in our form of government and in our institutions He yielded to no man and had good reason not to yield to any man in patriotism and love for his country This was first and dominant in his heart and upon it rested all the other of his excellent qualities

As well as a man may do so he had intrenched himself in the profession of the law and he carried nothing on the bench with him but only his unerring sense of right his unqualified integrity and his profound knowledge of the law

He was a broad man and liberal and courageous He possessed naturally and acquired all the qualities and qualifications of a judge He was wise and prudent and impartial He was so assured in honesty that he had rather wrong himself than that another should suffer wrong by act of his Be[illegible] [illegible] he looked through the deeds of men and gave men his charity His reason was not swayed by personal consideration or by affection nor by fear nor by consequences but to the right when the right was found he was as constant as the north star to the [illegible] He gave to every one his courtesy and respect because he felt respect and courtesy for all He recognized the rights of other men and was therefore patient and considerate and kind to other men

His intellect seemed to have had [illegible] the balance and equipoise and [illegible] were its attributes that he grappled with the intricate and involuted problems of a controversy with [illegible] and masterful delight and his solutions of them evidenced not alone [illegible] research and investigation but [illegible] of his mental breadth and caliber and of that state of preparedness which was native to his mind and the [illegible] of his natural faculties And [illegible] Judge Mooney equipped for duties of his position which he [illegible] and for those of more exalted [illegible] that awaited him had he not [illegible]

[illegible] a charming companion and [illegible] his friends in warmest and [illegible] loyal affection He excelled in [illegible] duties as a husband and father [illegible] night might pass when with [illegible] but that after the arduous duties [illegible] the day were laid aside he would [illegible] up his family and inquire of the [illegible] and welfare of all It seemed [illegible] sleep came not to his eyelids un[illegible] accompanied with the knowledge [illegible] all was well at home

[illegible] Mooney was as religious as [illegible] should be religion He pitied [illegible] unfortunate and was charitable and sympathetic and generous He walked [illegible] God not in fear and tremblin[illegible] [illegible] love and humility and awe [illegible] the unfaltering trust that [illegible] whose voice doth make the tem[illegible] [illegible] cease to blow
[illegible] stills the tumult of the raging sea
[illegible] he who hushes the raven s clamorous nest
[illegible] the lily fair in flowery pride
[illegible] in the way his wisdom sees the [illegible]
[illegible] all provision and provide
[illegible] life was gentle and the e[illegible]
so mixed in him that nature
[illegible] and say to all the [illegible]
this was a man

[illegible] all he has bequeathed to [illegible] little children a heritage richer that the ransom of a king Such was William I Mooney as I knew him

Tis said that the boon which heaven grants its favorites is early death His day had grown warm though his life s meridian did not yet seem high when the messenger came and his climbing steps were checked and he yielded up his health and his life to the duties of his office and profession

Of him his deeds will make report We who knew and know him will never forget him All our lives long he will glide into our memories like the tones of recollected music full and rich yet mellowed and made solemn by the solemn distance over which they sweep

EXPORTS OF THE UNITED STATES

IMPORTANT STATISTICS MADE PUBLIC TODAY

Record for Eleven Months Foots Up Enormous Total of $[illegible] Considerably Larger Than Exports of the Record Breaking Year

Washington Dec 29 —Exports of manufactured articles from the United States will this year probably exceed $[illegible]00 000 000 The record for the eleven months of the year which according to a report made public today by the department of commerce and labor foots up the enormous total of $[illegible] which is considerably larger than the value of the exports of 1900 which counted $411 000 000 and held the record up to the present year

Ten years ago our export was less than a third of what they are now

The department s report says that the increase in the exports of manufactured goods this year will very nearly offset the phenomenal reduction in exports of agricultural products The shortage in our own wheat supply coupled with the unusually large surplus in other countries has caused the exports in breadstuffs from the United States to fall off greatly in the [illegible] year The product of our mines on the other hand show an increase of $[illegible]000 000 for the export trade and the products of the forests $[illegible]

On the import side of the account the total for eleven months this year was $[illegible] against $[illegible] for the corresponding months of last year The greatest increase in imports occurs in articles of food chiefly sugar and coffee

HAIL THE NEW YEAR

BY DUNCAN MACRAE

1. Speed the old and hail the new,
While the stars their paths pursue,
While the mighty wheel of time
Sweeps around its course sublime,
While the earth goes rolling on
Through the shadow to the dawn!

2. Day to day and year to year,
We appear and disappear.
Century to century
Goes the way of destiny.
Silently fate's shuttles fly.
Everything is born to die.

3. In the miracle of change
Ever something new and strange
Rises from the depths profound
As the aeons cycle round.
Infinite variety
From the loom of Time we see
As the ages onward flee.

4. Out of life and into death
Is the passage of a breath,
Is a transient gleam of light
Swallowed in the coming night.
Children of the elements,
We are only incidents
In the circle of events.

5. Yet in the stupendous scheme
Of God's everlasting dream
We are portions, and can rest,
Trusting all is for the best.
We can cast our horoscope
By the golden stars of hope,
Where the gates eternal ope.

6. Like the old year that has gone,
Like the new year now in dawn,
So we pass from this estate
To a brighter one in wait.
We can cry when time is through,
With eternity in view,
Speed the old and hail the new.

MYSTERY PILED UPON MYSTERY

Developments in Dodge-Morse Divorce Scandal.

WELL-LAID PLOT TO SECURE GREAT FORTUNE

One of the Principals, in Fear of Death, Makes Confession.

JEROME AFTER THE MAN INVOLVED IN CONSPIRACY

Scheme To Wed Morse and Wealthy Widow Being Traced to Its Inventors—Mrs Morse on Way From Europe To Defend Her Good Name—Prominent in Story Is One of New York's Four Hundred

New York Dec 28—Mystery is piled upon mystery in the great Dodge-Morse marriage and divorce scandal. Now it is asserted that a widow worth $[illegible],000,000, a leader in society, was the stake for whom the conspirators in this remarkable plot were playing. Charles F Dodge, the servile tool of the plotters, is in fear of assassination and collapsed today from terror. He is said to have made a full confession. Mrs Morse is now on her way here from Europe to defend her name so violently assailed in the divorce tangle.

Not only are men of millions and high social and judicial positions involved in the conspiracy which the grand jury will investigate tomorrow, but there was mentioned the name of a woman of the highest social standing, who is said by the enemies of one of the central figures in the divorce proceedings to have been the prize for the capture of which the entire conspiracy was planned.

Not only was the name of this woman mentioned today but it was said also that the conspirators, finding their shrewdly conceived and daringly executed plans going astray as a result of the publicity given the case, sought to kill Charles F Dodge, their chief tool and the most dangerous witness, by means of "kindness." It was planned, so it was said, to kill Dodge, who was afflicted with a serious illness, by getting him into wild dissipations and all night orgies in Texas, in this way breaking down his already weakened constitution.

Not finding this method quick enough the conspirators, it is asserted, then got him into poker games with some of the worst characters in Texas and sought to bring about his end suddenly by getting him into a collision with the card sharps.

Thus sensation follows sensation, and District Attorney Jerome promises astounding revelations when the explosion comes or after the case is passed to the grand jury. Mr Jerome is confident that he will soon have a complete case against three men, and it is hopeful that his investigation will lead him to the bottom of the conspiracy.

The woman whose name was mentioned has a fortune of at least $5,000,000 and is an intimate friend of Charles W Morse and his wife. Not even the boldest of those who it is said sought to undo the marriage of Mrs Morse would dare to hint that the other woman was aware in the smallest degree of the plot of which Mrs Morse was the victim.

Just who had planned to capture the heart of the wealthy widow may become known after the grand jury has taken action and the archconspirators are indicted. So astutely was the whole conspiracy planned that it is questioned whether even Dodge knew of the ultimate result which those who induced him to commit perjury hoped to bring about.

The widow mentioned, besides being a woman of the highest social position, is a devout Roman Catholic. She adheres rigidly to the laws of her church, and on this point hinges the whole plot. Marriage to a divorced person is forbidden by her religion, and to this fact was ascribed much of the maneuvering in the famous case.

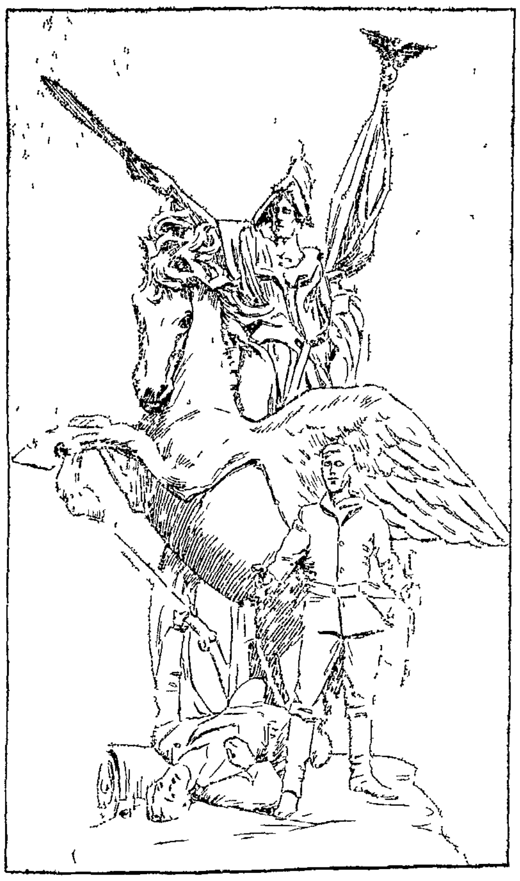
With a conspiracy afoot to have this widow married to C W Morse the conspirators seem to have hoped her scruples would not extend to a man whose marriage had been annulled.

What the conspirators could possibly have hoped to gain by bringing about a marriage between Morse and the rich widow also remains a mystery for the grand jury to solve. Why they should have spent thousands of dollars to separate him from his wife has not been explained.

It is not known where this widow is at present. Although her home was ablaze with light last night and there were several visitors in the parlor the butler said his mistress was traveling and that she had left no word as to her destination. It was also impossible to ascertain when she would be at home.

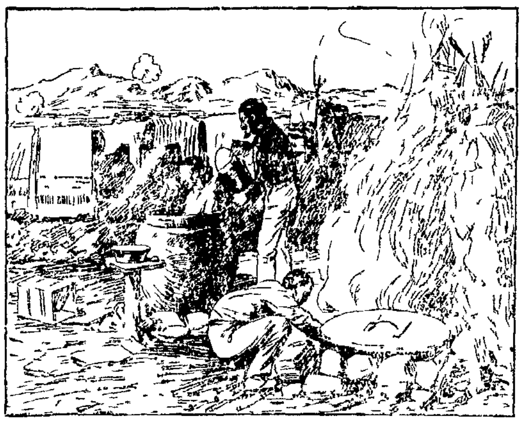
Instructive Pictures of Persons, Scenes and Things of Note

FINE MEMORIAL TO CALIFORNIA VOLUNTEERS.



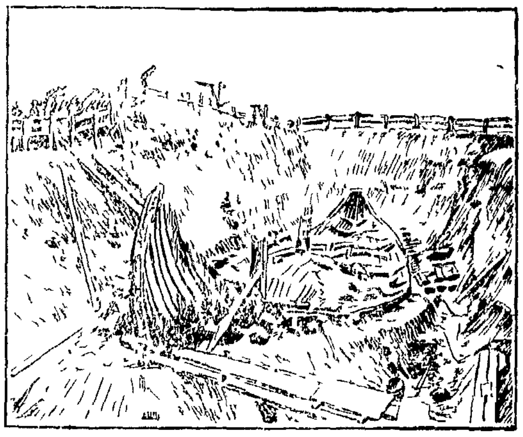
The cut illustrates the noble group of statuary which has been selected by the committee appointed to procure a suitable design for a memorial to those Californians who fought in the Philippine war. The group consists of the Goddess of Liberty mounted on a [illegible] and two [illegible] mortally wounded under the horse's feet [illegible] pistol in hand near the body of his fallen soldier. The height of the mounted figure is [illegible] which will add twelve feet. The figures will be [illegible] entirely of bronze. It will require a year to complete the work.

JAPANESE OFFICER'S BATH UNDER DIFFICULTIES.



The cut represents a Japanese officer who is taking his customary evening hot bath almost under fire. The battle is raging fiercely in the hills in the background and the officer is subject to call at any moment. The higher class Japanese are quite as devoted to their daily tub as the English are reputed to be, with the difference that it is taken hot and at bedtime. The sketch was made in a village near Port Arthur. The earthenware jar in which the officer is bathing is found in all Manchurian towns and is generally used to hold the drinking water for the family. Before getting into the jar the officer washed himself thoroughly with soap and water from the small pan on the tree stump. The hot water in the large jar will be used by several other bathers.

A THOUSAND-YEAR-OLD VIKING SHIP.



The craft herewith illustrated has recently been unearthed at Slagen, Norway, and is probably the pleasure barge of some viking queen who reigned a thousand years ago. Various circumstances point to this origin and design. It is not a war vessel, for no weapons of any description were found in the burial tumulus in which the ship lay. Other proof that it originally belonged to a woman were found in the facts that the rails and prow are covered with fine wood carving, illustrative of feminine occupations, and a loom and a beautiful sledge, unmistakably a woman's, were also picked up near the boat. All of the exhumed articles are in a wonderful state of preservation.

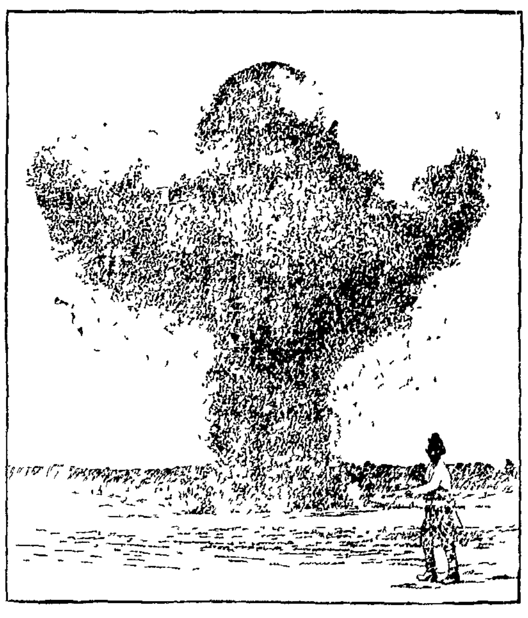
VIOLIN MAKING

The only place in the world where violin making may be said to constitute the staple industry is Markneukirchen in Saxony, with its numerous surrounding villages. There are altogether about 1[illegible]00 people in this district engaged exclusively in the manufacture of violins. The inhabitants, from the small boy and girl to the wrinkled gray headed veteran and the aged grandmother, are employed throughout the year in making some part or other of this instrument.

SMALLEST MONARCHY

The king ruling over the smallest monarchy in the world is the king of Cocos, a group of islands near Sumatra. These islands were discovered about [illegible] years ago by the captain of the Keeling, but were comparatively little known till 18[illegible]. When Mr Ross, an Englishman, visited them he was struck by their beauty and took up his abode there. It is his grandson George Ross who now holds sway over the Cocos.

EXPLOSION OF A RUSSIAN LAND MINE.



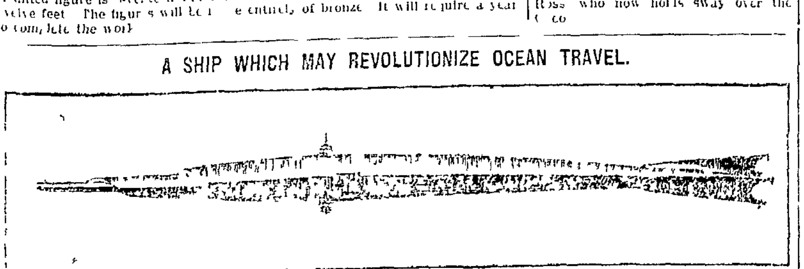
The picture represents the explosion of a land mine near Mukden, Manchuria. The cloud of jet black smoke which follows the discharge takes the form of a huge [illegible] from the earth. When the Russian Manchurian army [illegible] Mukden as the leading base of supplies the most skillful sappers and engineers in the empire were commissioned to make all approach to the place as hazardous as possible. They proceeded to [illegible] system of land mines and earthworks which will make an [illegible] the city a matter requiring great caution and infinite patience. The expedient of making an inland city impregnable by means of mines is something of an experiment, and the outcome is eagerly awaited by military men.

AN ORIGINAL SCIENTIST

Professor Harvey W. Wiley of Washington is one of the most notable chemists in America, and he has made excellent use of his knowledge. None of his efforts to diffuse scientific knowledge, however, has made such a firm impression on the public mind as have his experiments to determine the effect produced on the human system by the preservatives used by manufacturers of canned goods. For the purpose of accurate observation Professor Wiley organized a poison squad composed of a dozen healthy young employees of the agricultural department who were fed on [illegible] foods for a certain length of time. The claims of manufacturers and others that these goods were harmless have been disproved by the poison squad's experience. The members of it were all made ill save one, and he had rheumatism.

PROFESSOR H. W. WILEY

A SHIP WHICH MAY REVOLUTIONIZE OCEAN TRAVEL.



The cut represents the [illegible] the recent invention of a Frenchman, M. André Constantin, who asserts that [illegible] for ships to travel [illegible] knots an hour. The inventor says that [illegible] specially constructed [illegible] in front of which will be placed a con[illegible] principle which he [illegible]. This cone by [illegible] motions imparted by a horizontal shaft which he [illegible] front of the ship. The ship will be drawn forward by [illegible] as do letters through the postal pneumatic tube. [illegible] may breakfast in London and dine in New York [illegible] M. Constantin [illegible] and when or if his ideas should ever reach a successful culmination it will mean a complete revolution in the present system of [illegible] navigation.
